Lancaster Farming

Vol. 43 No. 24 Five Sections Lancaster Farming, Saturday, April 18, 1998 $28.50 Per Year 60¢ Per Copy

Seth Richards, from Petersburg in Huntingdon County, works with this group of elk cows born in 1994. They shed their winter coats in spring and have no upper teeth, except for two small tusks, possibly an indication of larger prehistoric tusks. These cows weigh between 500 and 800 pounds. ## Elk Farming Gains As Alternate Enterprise In Pennsylvania

PETERSBURG (Huntingdon Co.) — How would you like to raise an animal whose nearly 30-point antlers can be sold for $38 to $110 per pound; whose meat is right in line with today's market demands — low fat and low cholesterol; whose breed pastures more animals per acre than beef; and whose herd makes a great tourist attraction?

These reasons and more are why the number of elk and elk enthusiasts in Pennsylvania is growing. The Pennsylvania Elk Breeders Association met to organize in March of 1996 at the Turkey Ridge Elk Farm in Huntingdon County. Seth Richards and Nicole Auman welcomed 35 people to the meeting and to a tour of their elk handling facilities. Twelve people became members that night. The growing membership of the Pennsylvania association has reached 37. Membership in the North American Elk Breeders Association stands at 1,400.

Seth Richards first became interested in elk after seeing a booth at Ag Progress Days in 1994. At the stand that day, he gleaned as much information as he could from elk farmers Ron Murphy of Potters Mills, Centre Coun-

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Poultry Federation has seen its share of challenges: the avian influenza (A.I.) outbreak in the past year, food safety concerns, and Salmonella scares in the media.

But for one night each year industry members can celebrate their accomplishments with dinner and entertainment at the annual Pennsylvania Poultry Federation Fundraising Banquet at the Hershey Convention Center.

Next Wednesday, April 22, the Federation will host about 1,100 poultry producers and agri-industry representatives, families, and friends to the annual banquet. The evening begins with a reception at 5:30 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m.

The Federation, which is already going through a merger with PennAg Industries, faced some tough decisions this year: not the least of which was who to have

Maryland Adopts P-Based Nutrient Management

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff
ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The Maryland Legislature, as expected, on Monday approved a compromise legislative package that mandates phosphorus-based nutrient management.

According to Gov. Paris Glendening's press office, the governor is pleased with the adoption of the legislation, which is a result of a proposal he made that was adopted by the Senate.

The House had adopted a similar measure and in order to resolve the differences, the two measures were worked out in a conference committee comprised of members of both bodies of the state Legislature.

The Senate and House approved the recommendations of the conference committee after hashing out differences over the weekend, according to published reports.

What the legislation means is that virtually all farms in Maryland are to be required to have nitrogen and phosphorus based nutrient management plans.

According to a summary of the conference committee report, for those farms using commercial fertilizer, nitrogen and phosphorus-based plans are to be created by Dec. 31, 2001, and implemented by Dec. 31, 2002.

For those using manures or sludge, a nitrogen-based plan must be created by Dec. 31, 2001 and implemented by Dec. 31, 2002; and also have a nitrogen and phosphorus-based plan created by July 1, 2004, and the plan implemented by July 1, 2005.

Farms are to be inspected for the

Alumni Effort Grows Ag Class Greenhouse

York Co. Correspondent

Their brand-new curriculum — with 10 students — focuses on studies including plants and plant growth, soils, pest management, as well as teaching the business principles of operating a greenhouse.

The dilemma: no greenhouse from which to operate.

"So our ag advisory committee took it upon themselves to start a fund-raising program among the alumni and area businesspeople," credits ag science teacher Jennifer Gabryluk.

That drive was successful and a $5,000 greenhouse now stands in a courtyard in the center of the high school. In addition to raising monies, the ag alumni further pitched in with time and labor to help with the construction of the 20 x 40-foot, plastic-sheathed, quonset-style facility.

Just building the facility created another challenge. The school's courtyard is not accessible

ATTENTION TOBACCO FARMERS

Please write to these tobacco companies

According to independent buyers who come to this area, the so-called pinhookers, national tobacco companies will not allow them to buy at auction.

Now you need to ask the tobacco companies to send their own buyers to PA. After all, we have a 15 million pound, top quality crop for sale here.

Also explain to them the pain you go through when you can't sell your tobacco.

Ask them to send information back to you: Who is at fault? Will they send a buyer up here next year? Or should we stop growing tobacco in PA?

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO

Wed, Apr 15, 1998

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Another day of corrections by traders for grain and soybean bids. Rainfall in the Midwest and forecasts for additional moisture, boosted corn bids. Very light farmer selling was a factor in higher corn and bean bids. Wheat 1 to 7 cents higher. Corn 2 to 5 cents higher. Sorghum 8 to 9 cents higher. Soybeans 5 to 9 cents higher. The winter wheat crop is in excellent condition, however, traders are concerned that the cold temperatures predicted for late could cause some damage. Spring wheat planting continues to be delayed by wet weather. Very slow export sales this week has limited gains in all commodities. Corn planting is not quite underway in the Cornbelt area as rainy conditions continue to soak fields.

NEW MOON, APRIL 26.

NATIONAL ARBOR DAY

The fourth Friday in April (April 24, this year) is now the day most commonly observed for Arbor Day in our country. If you've ordered trees from a mail-order nursery and they arrive with the plant roots wrapped but bare of soil, be sure to keep them moist until you can put them in their final places. If they arrive before you're ready, consider "heeling them in," which means covering the roots and a bit of the stem with wet sawdust or composted soil. If they arrive with some soil around them, you've got time to spare. Be sure you dig the hole at least a foot wider and deeper than the root ball. You'll be glad you did.

TIP OF THE WEEK

PRALINE COOKIES

1/2 cup (1 stick) butter, softened
1-1/2 cups brown sugar
1 egg
1-1/2 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup chopped pecans

Beat together butter and sugar, add egg and beat well, then stir in flour, vanilla, and nuts. Chill the dough for 1 hour. Roll dough into balls and place 3 inches apart on greased baking sheets. Moisten the bottom of a drinking glass and use it to flatten the balls. Bake at 375° F for about 8 minutes, or until lightly browned. Remove immediately and cool on racks.

Celebrate Earth Day

America's agricultural community will come together for the first time to officially celebrate Earth Day with events highlighting agriculture's successful environmental practices and a public rededication to conserving and protecting the more than 1 billion acres of land used for producing food and natural fiber in the U.S. The USDA, local and state governments, and many interested organizations that have partnered with the ag community to actively support these efforts have joined in the national celebration from April 14 - 22.

Agriculture and the Environment: A Growing Partnership is a celebration that is moving across the country in a series of events and will culminate April 22 in Washington, D.C., with a public event at the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It will include remarks from national agricultural leaders; the kick-off of a major USDA public outreach campaign; and the public launch of a pledge drive that will reach out to the entire agricultural community and all its supporters through Earth Day 1999.

"Our country's two million farmers and ranchers face the daily task of helping provide food and natural fiber to families in the U.S. and around the world," said U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman. "And every day they take pride in protecting and enhancing our natural resources for today and for future generations."

A national poll showed that 89 percent of Americans believe that farmers are committed to protecting the environment. The poll was conducted by Penn + Schoen Associates on behalf of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives.

The agricultural community is continuously working with each other, various government agencies, and private companies to devise innovative programs that enable them to conserve soil and water resources and protect wetlands and wildlife habitat. And Earth Day gives us another opportunity to focus on our unity instead of our differences.

In early April, there was a hearing of the State Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee in Williamsport, Pa. Both farmers and agri-businesses were there to testify in favor of Pa. joining the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact. This compact will help to stabilize milk pricing to Pennsylvania's dairy farms. The Compact is already operating successfully in six New England states.

However, as usual, there was also testimony opposing the Compact, which has prompted this letter. Mr. Charles Markham, a

To Evaluate Starter Fertilizer

Farmers are aware of two key factors associated with fertilizer these days. First, it is expensive and second, too much is not good for the environment. Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, reminds us, with these two considerations farmers must carefully weigh the benefits of using a starter fertilizer when planting corn.

Starter fertilizer is usually most beneficial in cold, wet soils where nutrients are not always available to small plants. If starter fertilizers are applied, they supply the small plant with a small amount of easily accessible nutrients. As the soils warm and the plant grows, it is able to receive the required nutrients from the soil.

Deciding when to apply starter fertilizer should be based on weather conditions and fertility level of the soil. Corn is most likely to show a response to starter fertilizer when planted in cool soils which will remain cool based on the weather forecast.

To Look at Phosphorous Levels

Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, states corn is most likely to show a response to starter fertilizer on soil with a low phosphorous level. Soils with optimum or high levels of phosphorous are less likely to show a response.

When soils have an excessive level of phosphorous, even under cool growing conditions, corn is not very likely to show a response. Dr. Doug Beegle, Penn State Agronomy Department, states starter fertilizers rarely provide a benefit on soils that test high or excessive in phosphorous.

With the growing concern about phosphorous, farmers should be very careful when applying phosphorous fertilizers to soils that have high levels of phosphorous. Let the plants help you in reducing the levels already there.

To Look At Seed Corn Treatment

Last spring many corn fields had the seed in the ground for long periods of time before the seed germinated and green foliage appeared above the ground. Any time seeds spend long periods in the ground not growing, increases the potential for insects and diseases to attack the seed, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent.

Now is an excellent time to look at the seed labels to see what the seed is treated with. The possible treatments include Captan,

Background Scripture:

John 6:1-59

Devotional Reading:

Isaiah 55:1-11

Thirty-one years ago I purchased and read a remarkable book, Twelve Baskets Full, by Margaret T. Applegarth. Essentially it is a book of unique and profound story — medications based upon the account of Jesus feeding the 5,000. Few books have excited and inspired me as this book, the obvious intention of which is to help us see deeply beyond the raw details of the story.

This whole sixth chapter of John is written to help us look to the deeper and abiding meanings lurking below the surface of the obvious. We know the facts. Jesus and his disciples are beside the Sea of Galilee where they have been hunted down by a large multitude of people who have witnessed or heard about Jesus' signs. But these people will be hungry, and neither Jesus nor his little band have the bread to feed them or the money to buy it.

Then Jesus performs another sign: using a lad's five barley loaves and two fish, Jesus is able to feed the whole crowd of 5,000 people. And even more significantly, when all have eaten their fill, there are enough fragments left over to fill 12 baskets. I find it significant that this is the only so-called "miracle" (Jesus called them "signs") to appear in all four gospels.

A GREATER 'SIGN'

Despite the spectacular nature of this "sign," the deeper significance is an even greater "sign" and "miracle." If the evangelists were simply telling us that Jesus had the power to feed 5,000 people with five barley loaves and two fish, that's pretty impressive — but I'm not sure what it has to do with me and my life. The real meaning is so much more spectacular and mind-boggling than the mere multiplication of matter. Although that is quite a feat, it deserves the rank of "mere" beside the real meaning.

The next day people, finding him and his disciples gone, get into boats to find him on the other side of the lake. Puzzled, they want to know: "Rabbi, when did you come here?" (They really meant "How?" not "When?"). But, as he so often does, Jesus ignores the superficial level of their question and cuts to the heart of the matter: "Truly, truly I say to you, you seek me, not because you

Apron and Maxim or a combination of these products. Iowa State looked at the per cent emergence of early planted corn using no seed treatment, Captan, Captan plus Apron and Maxim plus Apron.

Results of this two year study showed no treatment resulted in a 48.9 per cent emergence. Captan alone had 82.1 per cent emergence and combination treatments had 85.9 per cent or better emergence.

saw signs, but because you ate your fill of the loaves" (6:25,26).

This response by Jesus always puzzled me, because it seemed to me that they followed him to the other side precisely because they did see his "signs." But today it occurred to me for the first time that he is really saying that, although they saw the signs they didn't really see that toward which the signs were pointing. These people had seen only the multiplication of loaves and fishes. The multiplication was only the medium, not the message.

NO EXPIRATION DATE

Then Jesus proceeds to what they had apparently missed: "Do not labor for the food which perishes, but for the food which endures to eternal life . . ." (6:27). We are no less blind than they were, for we too labor for food which perishes, instead of that which nourishes us to eternal life. So, the first thing Jesus says to them and us is that there is a bread, a source of nourishment that, unlike the things of this world, does not perish.

Jesus is not just talking about bread or even food in general here, but all material things. No matter how wonderful they may taste or feel, they are fleeting in their satisfaction and sustenance. If you look carefully there is an expiration date on each one of them! Again and again they need to be replenished. "Your fathers ate the manna in the wilderness, and they died" (6:49). So it is with the things we buy to eat and drink, the playthings we get to amuse ourselves, the objects we accumulate to persuade ourselves that we are getting somewhere in life.

Not only is there a bread which does not perish, Jesus tells them: "I am the bread of life . . . if anyone eats of this, he will live forever . . ." (6:48,51). You and I know today that Jesus was speaking figuratively about himself, but many who heard him were outraged to hear him say that they must "eat" this "bread." They could not stretch their minds to think of anything except the blatantly material which could not satisfy them or sustain them. But they could not be induced to look at the spiritual behind the material.

So whatever it is that you desire and set your heart on, check the expiration label before you spend too much for it. There is only one reality that has no expiration date: eternal life with Christ.

member of the Board of Directors of the National Assoc. of Convenience Stores, said higher milk prices could impact his industry. Well, Mr. Markham, I do not agree. I am a shift supervisor for a local convenience store, and can tell you that the bulk of what goes out of a C-Store is not dairy products. Most of our gross profit is from convenience foods such as pizza, subs, and soda. Let's not forget gas, cigarettes, and "novelty" items such as an over-the-counter, highly volatile drug called Ephedrine. I have been told the reason our stores are still carrying this item is because it is a high profit one. (So much for ethics.)

I have no idea what other C-Stores carry for product, but ours has a pizza franchise. This represents a huge chunk of our profits — and I do know that on the nights we are low on milk products — the pizza, subs and soda still fly out the door at an amazing rate.

Mr. Markham — your industry will always have some control of the pricing of your products. We sell our pizza for a profit — it would be self-defeating not to — right? Well, that is all dairy farmers are asking — to be able to have a profit margin to work with. They are still desperately trying to operate their businesses (farms) while being paid at the same level they were in the 1970s. How long could your industry survive at those prices? How many employees would you have if you only paid them the minimum wage of 1975??

I was proud of our store and the compliments we receive from customers, but now I am ashamed to represent an industry that is obviously not for the family farm. I would also like to mention that a lot of C-stores got their humble beginnings by selling their family's farm products — how soon we forget. (Wawa, Turkey Hill — do these ring a bell?)

I would like to suggest that anyone involved in agriculture to boycott C-stores. Cook at home — get your gas at the neighborhood station (there are still some left). STOP PAYING FOR CONVENIENCE — THEY ARE NOT HELPING YOU ONE BIT!!!!

Editor:

The Farm Act of 1996 removed farm support programs and eliminated disaster relief for crop loss. To offset the blow these provisions would have on the agricultural community, the government promised to expand the Federal Crop Insurance Program so that Crop Insurance would be a sturdy safety net for farmers in distress.

If the proposed legislation that is currently before Congress should pass, the government promises to stand behind the Federal Crop Insurance Program will be broken. Congress has proposed the following:

- CAT Crop insurance policyholders pay either a $60 administrative fee or 10 percent of the premium for the 1999 growing season.

- Higher 1999 Catastrophic Coverage Premiums.

• CAT coverage reduced from 60 percent of the established price to 55 percent of the established price.

- Service Fees to insurance carriers reduced.

In short, growers will be paying more money for reduced coverage and reduced service. This policy will impact high dollar farmers (apples, grapes, cranberries, blueberries, potatoes, cotton, citrus, tomatoes) much harder than most other growers (corn, soybeans). See illustrations following this letter.

The vote for this bill is currently being delayed, due to increasing support from growers across the nation. It is critical that you contact your senators and representatives immediately and make these three points:

- 1) Contrary to the notion that it impacts only the large wealthy farmers, this policy actually discriminates against farmers growing high dollar crops (apples, grapes, cranberries, blueberries, potatoes, cotton, citrus, tomatoes). Most growers (corn, soybean), will not be impacted by this policy.

2) The proposed change in government policy would break the government's promise that crop insurance will replace farm support programs. Crop insurance is the only safety net for the agricultural community.

3) The change in policy will unintentionally undermine the Federal Crop Insurance Program by forcing the larger, more progressive growers to drop out of the program and self-insure their crop. With the majority of the remaining growers being the higher risk farms, either rates will have to be increased or subsidies will have to be increased. As taxpayers, we find both of these options unacceptable.

4) Believing that specialized servicing would increase the quality of the service, the government transferred the servicing for crop insurance policies from the FSA to private insurance carriers. Like farmers, private insurance carriers have to allocate their resources based on profitability. In short, reduced service fees to carriers mean reduced service to farmers. This government mentality will destroy the Crop Insurance delivery system.

Thank you for your prompt attention to this matter. This issue is vital to the agricultural community. If you have any questions, please call me at 1-800-422-8335.

Liquid Opportunities With AerWay

AerWay makes manure nutrient incorporation faster, easier, and more effective

Patented AerWay - slattertimes make it possible

I chose the AerWay because it puts me in control of my liquid manure management system. This is particularly important as my farm is located next to a large Water Resource Shed. Prior to using the AerWay I had problems with soil compaction, manure run-off, ponding and loss of valuable nutrients. We spread between 3000 - 3500 U.S. Gal. per acre. The AerWay helped with the above problems, as well as reducing my tillage, fuel and labour expenses.

With less time spent in the field I am able to spend more time with my Hog Operation. The AerWay blends perfectly with my Conservation and Environmental Farm Plan.

LOOKING FOR AN AIR MOTOR THAT'S QUIETER AND MORE ECONOMICAL?

Air Motors

From 1/3 to 5 HP, Thomas rotary vane air motors provide reliable power for hundreds of demanding OEM and industrial applications. These compact and lightweight models (2-28 lbs.) feature variable speed operation from 300-10,000 RPM. Interchangeable with most competitive models, Thomas rotary vane air motors can operate in any position and are available in four mounts: hub mount, face mount, base mount, and NEMA mount.

In addition, all models can operate in clockwise or counter-clockwise rotations and most models can be instantly reversed with the turn of a four-way valve. Burn-out and stall-proof without damage if subjected to overloading. Thomas air motors also feature smooth air-cushioned starting and quiet operation.

Four-vane models provide maximum efficiency for most standard applications, and optional eight-vane models minimize blow-by for special inching and stalled-condition applications. The rotary vanes are made of a special material that resists moisture absorption and swelling allowing them to perform well at high ambient temperatures and safely in wet or harsh environments. Plus, springloading of the vanes provides maximum sealing and torque at low speeds.

'Forage Suitability' Something That Can Be Plotted, Used By Producers

ANDY ANDREWS

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.)

— Best results from those who want to begin grazing begin with planning. And producers who want to invest in a grazing system for their farm need to look at the details and come up with an overall plan that fits their soil conditions, livestock, climate, and other items specific to their operation.

Producers need to invest in an integrated forage livestock system, not just a grass grazing system, noted Edward B. Rayburn, extension forage agronomist with West Virginia University in Morgantown.

Rayburn spoke to more than 100 producers and grazing representatives recently at the Grazing in the Northeast Workshop at the Radisson Penn Harris Hotel and Convention Center in Camp Hill.

Graziers need to remember they are "harvesting sunlight and converting it to cash," Rayburn said. There is a science and an art to forage and livestock system management. "Managers need to understand the biology and ecology of the systems they are working with."

Until now, there has been little data about what types of soil conditions favor certain types of forage mixtures. However, work being undertaken by the USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) could change all that.

James B. Cropper, forage management specialist with the USDA NRCS at the Pasture Systems and Watershed Management Research Laboratory in University Park, spoke about forage suitability at the conference.

What kind of forages would be suitable for grazing? A new assessment procedure has been proposed by the University of Wisconsin Cooperative Extension and the NRCS Grazing Lands Technology Institute, according to Cropper.

The procedure rates the condition of a pasture site. The pasture condition rating worksheet is in early stages of development. Based on a Wisconsin extension publication, it rates the condition of a pasture based on the following characteristics: plant desirability, density, vigor, percent legume in the stand, uniformity of use, presence of sheet and rill erosion, stream bank and gully erosion, concentrated livestock areas, soil compaction, and site resilience.

Plant vigor causative effects are soil fertility, soil pH, severity of livestock use, and forage species adaptation.

Another way to assess pastures is through forage suitability group

(FSG) formulation and documentation in the NRCS "National Range and Pasture Handbook."

Not all areas have been documented at this time. However, one sample shown at the conference details an FSG for the eastern Allegheny Plateau and mountains. The FSG sheet provides detail for suitable forage crops based on deep, channery, well-drained, strongly acid, and moderately steep upland soils, consisting of Hartleton channery silt loam, Hazelton channery loam, and Leck Kill channery silt loam. Details on the FSG for two examples, one in Coudersport and Johnstown, are provided in this issue.

Provided are adapted forage species for the soil types and climatic conditions of those areas.

These tools, according to Cropper of NRCS, can help producers select species for forage production, what to use to get production, and specific management practices to sustain production.

In a short time, according to Cropper, "new tools will be ready to do an even greater job" of proper resource management, he noted.

According to Rayburn of West Virginia University, another vital link to improved forage systems is getting the right animal genetics.

"Animal genetics and herd health go a long way to make any grazing management program look good," Rayburn said.

FSG No.: G-127NY401PA

Major Land Resource Area: N127 - Eastern Allegheny Plateau and Mountains

Climate: Average annual precipitation ranges from 40 to 56 inches. Snowfall ranges from 35 inches in the south to 90 inches in the north. Snow cover at depths greater than one inch average a high of 90 days at higher elevations in the north to a low of 20 at lower elevations in the south. Growing season precipitation ranges between 22 and 32 inches. Average monthly precipitation is rather evenly distributed during the year ranging from 2.7 inches to 4.5 inches. Precipitation events of more than 0.1 inch occur about every 3 to 4 days on average. Average annual minimum temperature ranges from 0 degree F to -20 degrees F. Average July temperature ranges from 68 degrees F. to 72 degrees F. Average freeze-free period is 100 days to 160 days. This is greatly influenced by elevational position on the mountains or in the valleys. It is less affected by latitude although it trends higher to the south once the Maryland - West Virginia border is reached. Growing degree days, base 40 degrees F., is 3500 to 5000 annually. Growing degree days, base 50 degrees F., for the 30 week period from March 1 to September 26 is 2000 to 3000. Relative humidity is high throughout the growing season averaging about 55 percent at mid-afternoon increasing during the night to 80 percent at dawn. Potential evapotranspiration ranges from 22 to 27 inches. See water budgets for Coudersport and Johnstown, PA.

Soil Suitability Group Description:

The soils in this group are moderately steep, deep, well drained soils on hilltops and hillsides. Although considered deep, the soils in this group are underlain by sandstone, siltstone, or shale bedrock at depths of 46 to 54 inches. The topsoil is a channery loam to silt loam having 15 percent or more thin, flat rock fragments as much as 6 inches long. Available water holding capacity is moderate ranging from 3.7 to 5.4 inches within maximum rooting depth. Topsoil and subsoil pH's of unlimed soils range from 3.6 to 6.0. Cation exchange capacity in the topsoil ranges from 12 to 20. Organic matter content of the topsoil ranges from 1 to 4 percent. Frost heave potential on the soils in this group is moderate. Seasonal high water table is at depths greater than 6 feet. Deeply incised water courses are often present on the hillslopes occupied by this soil group. These water courses run the length of the slope and parallel to each other. They may be intermittent or spring-fed.

Pennsylvania Announces New RC&D Area

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Southeastern Pennsylvania Resource Conservation and Development (RC&D) Area has been authorized and funded by Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman to provide economic and resource assistance to Berks, Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Lehigh, Montgomery, and Northampton counties as of March 17, according to Janet Oertly, state conservationist, USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service.

Southeastern Pennsylvania RC&D began providing assistance to communities within its area prior to authorization with projects such as the Quakertown Swamp in Bucks County. The wetland, one of the largest blue heron rookeries in the state, has been designated as one of the two most important bird areas in the county by the National Audubon Society.

RC&Ds are grass-roots efforts of local citizens to provide leadership for improving the economic base of the community through the wise use of available natural and human resources. RC&D's work with small businesses to find and expand markets, research uses and value, adding to local products and developments of many other activities.

For information on the Southeastern Pennsylvania RC&D, contact council chairman William VanIngen at (215) 675-3198. For information on other RC&Ds throughout the state, contact Terry Mitchell, assistant state conservationist, NRCS, at (717) 237-2205.

Elk Farming Gains Alternate Enterprise

County, and Delmont Sunderland of Huntingdon. Richards started his elk farm with an old truck, a tractor, 100 acres, and 10 bred cows. From these 10 cows he gained eight calves in the spring of 1996. Then he bought a bull. Later in the fall of 1997 he purchased 13 more elk to bring his total to 40 animals.

"One of the advantages of elk is that I can put three in the same space as one beef or dairy cow," Richards says of his pastures and paddocks. Richards designed his own pie-shaped paddocks with centralized handling facilities. With this type of design, Seth or Nicole can feed and water several paddocks of animals efficiently. He has designed — and redesigned — round bale feeders, protective tree fences, and gravity-fed water systems — redesigned in several cases, because these powerful 500- to 1,000-pound animals like to play rough. His feed trough is secured with log chains, and boards with wire to protect trees were replaced with 1x6 rails built in a triangular shape. To protect the bull elk's velvet antlers, Richards built his round bale feeder for access from the top.

The American Elk

The Shawnee Indians called them wapiti, which means white rump. Arriving European settlers found herds throughout Pennsylvania. But by the early 1800s, the elk had been pushed out of the southern corners of the state. The very last native Pennsylvania elk was reportedly killed in 1867 near the headwaters of the Clarion River.

In the early 1900s, the Pennsylvania Game Commission purchased 145 elk for $30 each from Yellowstone National Park and released them along with 22 from private game reserves and 10 from a wild South Dakota herd, into 10 central and northeastern Pennsylvania counties. The Game Commission conducted elk hunting seasons from 1923 until 1931 in which 98 bulls were killed. The Game Commission believed that by the mid-1960s, only 50 to 100 elk remained, their survival hampered by brainworms and poaching.

In the 1970s, to aid the state's failing elk herd, the Game Commission started creating open areas covered with clover, oats, birds-foot trefoil, timothy hay, and other crops to draw animals away from agricultural areas. Shifting the herd to a new territory helped decrease poaching and the elk's accidental ingestion of the snails that cause brainworms. Pennsylvania's herd today is estimated at between 350 and 400 animals.

At the beginning of this year, the Game Commission trapped and transferred 16 elk from Elk County to Clinton County's Sproul State Park and neighboring Elk and Moshannon State Forests, giving the elk a 450-square-mile forest range with few permanent human residents.

A FORCE Field Takes Corn To A New Level.

No other corn insecticide controls tough insect pests like rootworms, cutworms, wireworms and white grubs better than FORCE insecticide. But that's just one reason why farmers who've experienced a FORCE Field of protection — in no-till, minimum till and conventional tillage systems — stick with it year after year.

The other big reason is that FORCE is safe to birds, earthworms and you. Our 3G formulation lets you handle half as much FORCE as other insecticides. To save you time, money and cut your insecticide exposure in half.

The newer pyrethroid chemistry of FORCE gives you better, straighter stands than older, less effective insecticides. And FORCE doesn't interact with sulfonyleurea herbicides.

Don't settle for less than a FORCE Field of protection. Ask your full service crop protection dealer/applicator for FORCE. Or call our hotline at 1-800-759-2500.

Elk Farming

Seth Richards' desire is to build one of the best genetic herds around so that demand takes care of itself. For optimal health, he changes the protein rations throughout the year — 14 percent in the fall for energy, 16 percent in November, and 20 percent for antler growth and milk for calves the rest of the time.

"I want to supply as good quality genetics as I can. The antlers are just a bonus. This May, I hope to calve 11 or 12 animals. The average heifer sells for $4,000, bulls for $1,500 to $3,000. Korea is the biggest buyer of velvet antler. The antler market consists of caribou, reindeer, red deer, and elk. The Koreans prize the North American large antler elk. The Orientals try to maintain a healthy body, unlike the western way of consulting a doctor after you are already sick."

According to Richards, most of the trace minerals, minerals, amino acids, Omega 6 and Omega 3, hormones, and protein needed for good health can be found in elk antler. Ground antler has been mixed with other herbs and used for over 2,000 years. Richards sells to three different companies that develop capsule and liquid herbal formulas.

Marketing of elk meat is still an untapped market. In fact, the United States imports 150 tons of venison annually. Richards says there are approximately 110,000 elk on farms in North America. To support a steady meat market, 400,000 to 450,000 animals are needed.

Even though elk can be registered and ear-tagged, tested for TB and brucellosis, vaccinated, wormed, and artificially inseminated, it's best not to forget that they are still wild animals. Pennsylvania law requires that elk farmers erect a 10-foot high perimeter fence mainly to protect them from the white-tail deer's meningeal worm (brainworm). In addition Richards' interior fences stand 6½ feet high. His confinement and handling facilities have

Order No. 4 Price $14.38 For March

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Rex F. Lothrop today announced a March 1998 weighted average milk price of $14.38 per hundredweight. The weighted average differential price was $1.60 per hundredweight and the producer nonfat milk solids (NFMS) price was 88 cents per pound. The weighted average price was down 26 cents from February but was 77 cents higher than a year earlier. The producer NFMS price was down seven cents from last March. The nonfat milk solids price, applicable to handler payments, was $.8893 per pound for the month, down 6.31 cents from last year. The gross value of March producer milk, adjusted to 3.5 percent butterfat was $81.0 million, compared to $82.0 million a year ago.

Mr. Lothrop said that producer receipts totaled 566.4 million pounds during March, a decrease of 39.3 million pounds from last March and the average daily delivery of 4,113 pounds per producer increased 398 pounds or 10.7 percent from a year earlier. A total of 4,443 producers supplied Order 4 handlers during the month, a decrease of 817 from a year ago. Class I producer milk totaled 230.7 million pounds and was down 21.8 million pounds, or 8.6 percent from last March. Class I milk accounted for 40.73 percent of total producer milk receipts during the month, compared with 41.68 percent in March 1997.

The average NFMS test of producer milk was 8.74 percent, up from 8.72 percent the previous year. The average butterfat test of producer milk was 3.75 percent, up from 3.68 percent in March 1997.

Middle Atlantic Order pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales of 193.1 million pounds during March, a decrease of 7.9 percent from a year earlier, after adjustment to eliminate variation due to calendar composition.

through any outside doors. So, protective layers were put down on a portion of the hallway for the skid loaders of stone that had to be hauled in for the structure's floor.

Once the foundation was down, metal pipe trusses were put into place to support the plastic sheathing of the enclosure. As soon as the electrical hookups are completed, the horticulture students can begin digging in to this hands-on part of the curriculum.

"The greenhouse should be self-supporting," anticipates

Gabryluk. Plans are for raising and selling plants to cover the costs of the seeds, cuttings and supplies. Chrysanthemums are the first crop planned for sale out of the new structure.

Biology classes will also be using the greenhouse for a variety of studies in the future, thus giving up to 300 students each year access to its unique teaching and experimental environment. The Ag Science curriculum will also be expanded and offered as a science alternative for the 1998-99 school term.

Bob Gross, greenhouse committee chairman, hauled skid-loaders of stones through the school hallway for a foundation for the courtyard greenhouse.

Pennsylvania Fairs Brochure Available

GRATZ (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs (PSACF) announces that a listing of all the agricultural fairs within the state is available in a colorful brochure. Each fair is listed by county; information available is fair name, location, contact phone number, and the date of the 1998 event. For easier reference, the state is divided into four regions.

County fairs, the showplace of Pennsylvania Agriculture, attracts approximately seven million visitors during their April through October season. Nearly every county in Pennsylvania has at least one agricultural fair and many have more than one. A total of 113 events are held yearly.

Agri-business and agriculture is Pennsylvania's number one industry. Farming and related agri-business employ over one million Pennsylvanians each year, and contribute approximately $30 billion in economic activity in Pennsylvania. The agricultural fairs are the showplace of this monumental industry.

Phosphorus Conference: Farmers Need Tools

Lancaster Farming Staff
STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — More research is needed on phosphorus, according to researchers and nutrient managers attending a three-day conference on agricultural phosphorus in the Chesapeake Bay Watershed.

The conference was held last week at the Penn Stater Conference Center (formerly the Scanticon, located near the football stadium) in State College.

In addition, to continued research on the roles and actions of phosphorus in the real world, according to members of a four-person panel representing those who manage nutrients and deal with phosphorus, research efforts need to be emphasized in developing practical, reliable and inexpensive tools to help those in the field actually working to manage nutrients.

The panel discussion followed the presentations of 12 speakers during the first two days of the conference.

The last day's panel of four people with practical nutrient management were asked to share their experiences and to discuss their practices and concerns.

The proceedings of the conference are to be published later this year, according to Dr. Andrew Sharpley, a soil scientist working for the USDA Agricultural Research Service at its Pasture Systems and Watershed Management Research Laboratory in University Park.

Jointly sponsored by the Chesapeake Bay Program's Scientific and Technical Advisory Committee and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service, the conference was attended by specialists and researchers of nutrient management, soil science, agricultural operations and the nutrient phosphorus.

Represented were those involved with commercial fertilizer businesses, integrated livestock operations, feed companies, manure application and nutrient management businesses, state environmental and resource conservation agencies, environmental awareness and support groups, and, of course, university and government research and Extension services.

The conference objectives were to determine the inputs of phosphorus to the Chesapeake Bay watershed and assess the current status of phosphorus in agricultural soils; establish the relative impact and location of source areas; identify and delineate what processes control the critical sources and pathways of phosphorus export over a range of scales in the Bay Watershed; and discuss and prioritize future trends for phosphorus management in the Chesapeake Bay Watershed.

Information was presented by, and shared with, representatives of the other states involved with the Chesapeake Bay restoration effort.

The phosphorus conference was held to "... initiate efforts to identify (agricultural runoff) sources of phosphorus, the controls of phosphorus export, and recommend approaches for targeted, cost-effective, nutrient management plans throughout the Bay region."

As reported last week, for Pennsylvania agriculturalists the information presented suggested that nutrient management here will likely not become recommended as an "either/or" priority exercise, as is to happen in Maryland.

Maryland's situation was an issue of concern during the conference. It was reported that approval of legislation to create phosphorus-based nutrient management was imminent.

On Monday the Maryland Legislature, as expected, gave final approval of compromise legislation to regulate phosphorus applications to Maryland's soils.

According to a Maryland expert on the situation, the proposed legislation is expected to affect every farm in the state.

In essence the Maryland situation is to be that no one will be able to spread manure on their farmland if the phosphorus level of the manure would create a surplus of that nutrient. Nitrogen is to be purchased and used to fertilize crops. Manure is to be exported.

For Pennsylvania, it seems more likely that for instances where phosphorus is a problem, that practical nutrient management will be expanded in scope to go one step beyond focusing upon balancing nitrogen levels in manure with crop yield needs and existing soil levels.

From research demonstrating that agricultural phosphorus entering waterways comes from a small portion of a watershed, and in most cases from spot areas on a farm (generally along a stream or in a flood plain), it was suggested that perhaps the most reasonable approach for Pennsylvania would be to identify those "source" areas on the farm as part of the existing nutrient management plan, and then manage those areas for the phosphorus levels.

As currently practiced, a Pennsylvania nutrient management plan is an exercise in accounting for nitrogen available for application to land and crop needs, a description of the pathways for nutrient flow, and management practices.

Another widely grasped aspect of phosphorus that was highlighted during the conference is that, in historic terms, it is only recently that phosphorus has become excessive.

For years it was a nutrient in demand that limited agricultural production.

It can be lost too, if it isn't treated with respect.

The bottom line of a presentation on world phosphorus, was that the world was phosphorus poor prior to the World Wars, especially since World War II man has been able to get lots of it.

It has been mined it from sediment loads made up to 250 million years ago, and gathered from other sources (guano) adding significantly to the existing amount of phosphorus that is now cycling in the world's ecosystems.

According to speakers, a lot of effort and money went into securing phosphorus for increased crop production and higher yields.

They said it would seem unwise to use treatments for swine or poultry manure that would bind the phosphorus into an unusable or unrecyclable form, turning back the clock on its bioavailability.

However, the panel of four discussed the way they are currently dealing with the situation.

On the panel were David Brubaker with Hershey Ag in Marietta, a swine-raising operation; William Carmean of Snow Hill, Md., a poultry and grain farmer; Turp Garrett with Worcester County Cooperative Extension Service in Snow Hill, Md., which is in the middle of the poultry industry and watershed central to the pending Maryland phosphorus management law; and Jerry Hostetter owner and president of Hostetter Management Company in Lititz, a swine production and management company with 13,000 sows and 50 finisher barns.

From his perspective, Carmean talked about the uses of manure applications and alternative uses. He said he has been able to save from $3,000 to $5,000 per year in fertilizer costs from being able to use the nutrients in the manure his operations generate.

He said that he also already treats his poultry litter with alum, one of the suggested ways of treating manure to bind phosphorus, in order to treat beetles and for other reasons.

He said in order to compost his manure he'd have to expand his operation's manure sheds (used now to prevent rain from falling on it and leaching nutrients before it can be applied to fields) in order to be able to store it long enough to compost it.

Additionally, he'd have to spend extra time and money searching for markets for the compost.

He also said that some of the land in the Pocomoke watershed that never had poultry manure applied is naturally high in phosphorus.

David Brubaker said he oversees "... the application and utilization of organic nutrients from our farms."

He said that "phosphorus is part of the puzzle" in piecing together his entire hog farm nutrient management plan.

According to Brubaker, what he could use from researchers are new techniques for separating liquids from solids, which could allow long-distance hauling of nutrients derived from the highly liquid swine manure.

The only technology that has been provided for swine operators to reduce the water volume of the manure is a two-stage lagoon system, which they employ.

He said nutrient testing of manure needs to be improved in order to keep up with regulatory demands.

He said, as it is now, he samples the manure he is about to apply on fields, but that it takes two weeks to get the nutrient analysis results.

If he could have a test provide on-site results, he said he'd be able to apply manure more intelligently than what current technology allows.

He also said that what is needed is "more constructive and productive dialogue between processors, researchers and regulators. He said the reason he agreed to participate in the conference was because he felt that it might be beneficial.

But he added that researchers and regulators need to be better educated about the real-world applications of technology and science.

He also said that he is frustrated because, he sees many blatant violations of existing laws that aren't enforced on smaller operations.

"We should all be under the same set of rules regardless of the size of operation," he said.

Hostetter discussed somewhat more of the global aspect of the locally expressed nutrient concern.

His company is global. He was along with state Gov. Tom Ridge on an export mission trip to the Pacific Rim last fall.

In essence, he said the Pacific Rim doesn't have the land and resources to raise swine as efficiently as his company can, and they need and desire the food. The United States has the capacity, and the latest technology. That should be built upon, not torn down.

Hostetter talked about how the swine industry has changed significantly since he became involved in 1981.

He said that with a kill of 3,000 hogs per day, it was possible to gain backfat measurements on carcasses. He said that in 1981 the measured carcasses averaged 1.7-inches of backfat. He said 15 years later, the average backfat produced is down to .6-inch, reflective of feeding efficiencies he said. (Not to mention genetics.)

He said he didn't think it was necessary to sacrifice the environment in order to produce food.

According to Hostetter, through better efficiencies, the swine industry has been able to reduce the phosphorus in the swine feed by 28 percent. "We saw a cost savings and no change in performance."

The ration has 43 percent less phosphate now and he said they look at manure samples.

As far as using phytase, an enzyme that helps swine and poultry better utilize phosphorus in feed, he said they are in the process of using it.

Feeding efficiencies in hog raising have increased too, he said. He said that former good rates of growth were about 3.5 pounds of — The custom rates shown are averages from voluntary reports by custom operators and farmers throughout Pennsylvania. Most of the rates are stated per acre, cwt., ton, bale, or bushel rather than per hour to reduce the variation due to machinery size. Individual rates vary due to differences in working conditions, services performed, or even the operator's eagerness to do custom work. Therefore, the average rates shown should not be considered absolute indications of fair charges.

Acreage rates are shown separ-

tely for two regions of the state, labeled "Mountain" and "Valley." The differences in rates between regions reflect differences in terrain, soils and alternative opportunities for the labor and equipment used. Figures labeled "State" represent the straight average of all reports used regardless of geographic location.

Of the 72 rates reported with year-to-year comparisons, 36 increased, 26 decreased, and 10 are the same as last year. The overall average is up to 2 percent from the previous year. This percentage increase was computed by adding the rates for all jobs, regardless of basis of charge, and dividing by last year's comparable total.

Morrow Named Penn State Alumni Fellow

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — David A. Morrow of State College, professor emeritus in Michigan State University's College of Veterinary Medicine, has been named an Alumni Fellow by the Penn State Alumni Association. Morrow is now a consulting veterinarian and owner-manager of Arch Spring Farm, Tyrone.

"Nationally, Dr. Morrow has been lauded for his outstanding research and contributions to the dairy industry," said Robert D. Steele, dean of the College of Agriculture Sciences, in nominating Morrow for the award. "He exemplifies the qualities we attempt to create in our graduates — a commitment to goals, a vision for himself and his profession, an ability to communicate effectively, and leadership skills that motivate him to initiate new activities and inspire others to new ideas."

Morrow graduated with high honors from Penn State in 1956, earning a B.S. in dairy science. He received his D.V.M. in 1960 and his Ph.D. in 1967, both from Cornell University.

A former faculty member at Cornell and Michigan State Universities, Morrow has published more than 200 professional and technical articles and spoken at more than 200 state, regional, national and international agricultural and veterinary meetings. He is past national president of the veterinary medicine honor society Phi Zeta; charter diplomat of the American College of Theriogenologists; and a member of the Society of Theriogenology, the American Veterinary Medical Association and the American Association of Bovine Practitioners.

Morrow is active in many facets of Penn State. He is a member of the university's Board of Trustees, elected by agricultural societies. In addition, he is past president of the Penn State Alumni Association and a member of its executive board, past president of the College of Agricultural Sciences Alumni Society, a judge and dedicatee of the Dairymen's Club and Dairy Exposition, an honorary Lion Ambassador, a board member of the Penn State Alumni Chapter of Centre County, a Distinguished Alumnus of the dairy and animal science department, and president of the Greek Alumni Interest Group.

Morrow has received several other honors and awards, including the Borden Award from the American Veterinary Medical Association in 1980, the American Feed Manufacturers' Veterinary Medical Research Award in 1982, the Norden Distinguished Teaching Award from Michigan State University in 1975, and the World Dairy Expo's Industry Person of the Year Award in 1997. He also was named to the National Alpha Zeta Centennial Honor Roll in 1997.

In connection with the Alumni Fellow honor, Morrow will visit campus this fall to interact with faculty, staff and students.

The Alumni Fellow award, the highest award presented by the Penn State Alumni Association, is administered in cooperation with the academic units. The Board of Trustees has designated the title of Alumni Fellow as permanent and lifelong.

Soil Limitations: Primary soil limitation for this group is the acidic nature of the surface and subsurface soil layers. These soils may be near neutral to strongly acid, depending on whether or not these soils have been limed in the past. If lime has been applied to bring the pH up to at least 6.0, then Kentucky bluegrass, bromegrass, orchardgrass, and alfalfa are additional climatically adapted forage species selections to those listed on page 3.

Frost heave potential on these soils is moderate. Open winters after wet falls with significant freeze-thaw cycles may cause an occasional loss or reduction of alfalfa stands. Probability of alfalfa stand reduction or loss is once in 5 years on average.

Slopes are moderately steep. Additional caution should be used when driving wheeled equipment as slopes near 25 percent. Potential for severe cattle trail erosion and underutilized pasture areas is high. This is heightened by a single watering facility located at the upper or lower end of pasture greater than 800 feet long in the direction of the slope. Fence construction on this soil group requires more line brace assemblies to maintain adequate wire fence tension as more breaks in grade are encountered than on smoother, flatter sloped soil groups.

Channery rock fragments will interfere with post setting and seedbed preparation somewhat. Tillage tools will wear out prematurely. The rock fragments are also largely responsible for the plant available water holding capacity (AWC) to be in the moderate range. The same soils without the channers are in the high AWC range. Forage production on these soils of moderate water holding capacity will be noticeably affected.

implementation of the plan, plans are to be filed with the Maryland Department of Agriculture, and the department is to maintain a copy of the plan for three years in a manner that protects the identity of the individual.

Fines are to consist of notification for a first offense for not having a plan, followed by a penalty of not more than $250 for subsequent failure to have a plan; a warning for a first offense of not implementing a plan, followed by a fine of not more than $100 for each subsequent violation, not to exceed $2,000 per farmer or operator per year.

The fines are to be paid into the Maryland Agricultural Water Quality Cost Share Program.

Those who apply nutrients to land on a commercial basis must be a certified nutrient management consultant or work under one, while those who apply to their own land must complete an educational program in nutrient application (to be developed by the Md. Department of Agriculture), every three years.

For the application of nutrients to non-agricultural lands of three or more acres, or state property, are to follow the recommendations of the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service.

There are provisions to supply funds for cost-sharing for the development of plans; for creating a service to match up those with excess manure and those who could use it; to establish a four-year pilot program to establish a transfer and market system to more poultry litter.

By Dec. 31, 2001, all contract feed that is fed to chickens has to contain phytase or some other enzyme that helps utilize the birds uptake of phosphorus in order to reduce the level in the litter.

There is to be money also to develop and demonstrate alternative uses and markets for animal waste.

Farmers are to receive tax credits of up to $4,500 per year for three years for costs related to transitioning to phosphorus-based nutrient management, and an additional deduction for equipment expenses related to poultry or livestock manure spreading.

There are to be funds to pay for the hiring of at least 110 field positions in the state's soil conservation districts by July 1, 1999.

There is to be a religious exemption.

The legislation provides that the Maryland Department of Agriculture may adopt religious exemptions in case the law creates "... a conflict with the bona fide religious beliefs and practices of persons subject to this subtitle."

It was explained earlier this year that reflected concern for the Plain Sects.

In a news release calling the legislative session a success for Maryland, Gov. Glendening said, "This 1998 legislative session is a tremendous victory for all Maryland families. As a direct result of the strong partnership and spirit of cooperation between the Legislature and my Administration, we are on the verge of completing a remarkable legislative session that will really make a difference in the lives of the children and families in Maryland."

The nutrient management legislation is called the Water Quality Improvement Act of 1998. It is the first piece of legislation praised in the news release, and is described as "a measure that will protect the

Land O'Lakes Reports Good Year

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks Co.) — Land O'Lakes recorded its third best year in history, with Dairy Foods sales of $2.2 billion and earnings of $30.2 million, it was reported to members attending a series of Dairy Foods Unit meetings in the Mid-Atlantic region.

Sales were up 29 percent over the previous fiscal year, due in part to Land O'Lakes 1997 merger with Atlantic Dairy Cooperative. The earnings, up 8 percent, represent a 26-cent per hundredweight allocation to members. In 1997, Land O'Lakes returned $9.1 million in cash patronage and equity involvement to its Dairy Foods members.

During the meetings, members were updated on a potential merger with Dairyman's Cooperative Creamery Association (DCCA) of Tulare, Calif. DCCA is a premier manufacturer of butter, cheese, nonfat dry milk and whey. The cooperative's 240 members produce 4 billion pounds of milk annually.

A merger with DCCA would enhance Land O'Lakes national supply plan and would allow the cooperative to expand its international marketing. A merger also would complement Land O'Lakes West Coast marketing, of which Land O'Lakes has the number one market share in natural cheese in southern California, members were told.

In addition to the business reports, elections were held for several leadership positions. Elected as unit delegates in each of the Mid-Atlantic's 23 Dairy Foods Units (DFU) were: James W. Hallowell, Ottsville, DFU1; David Cadwallader, Salem, N.J., DFU2; Scott Kreider, Quarryville, DFU3; Jeffrey Moore, Centreville, Md., DFU4; and Nelson Haebecker, Lancaster, DFU5.

Also, Walter C. Martin, New Holland, DFU6; Dale Hershey, Elm DFU7; David Bitler, Fleetwood, DFU 8; Ernest Gelsinger, Robesonia, DFU9; James A. Stonesifer, Union Bridge, Md., DFU10; Elvin M. Rohrer Jr., Cochranville, DFU11; P. Robert Wenger, Quarryville, DFU12; Loren Yoder, Belleville, DFU13; Allen Wehr, Mifflinburg, DFU14; and Stanley C. Meyers, Greencastle, DFU15.

Also Ralph McGregor, East Berlin, DFU16; G. Allen Rowe, Williamsport, Md., DFU17; D. Ray Geissinger, Mifflintown, DFU18; Donald Bergey, Millville, DFU19; Donald Brumbaugh, Curryville DFU20; Thomas Wakefield, Bedford, DFU21; James Sonnema, Gillet, DFU22; and Levi Ransom, Nicholson, DFU23.

Unit delegates represent local dairy farmer members at Land O'Lakes annual meeting and Joint Directors meeting, among others. Terms are for one year, with no term limits.

One hundred forty-seven members also were elected as area delegates. Area delegates represent members at the June leadership meeting and the fall regional meeting. Terms are for one year, and members are eligible to serve up to three consecutive, one-year terms.

In other business, a total of 80, 25-year membership awards were presented, along with 14, 50-year membership awards.

Approximately 290 quality premium awards were presented to members who qualified for Land O'Lakes quality milk bonus for 12 consecutive months between August 1996 and December 1997.

health of Maryland citizens and the Chesapeake Bay, while establishing both short- and long-term strategies for fighting toxic Pfiesteria in the state's waterways."

According to several sources, Gov. Glendening had threatened the Legislature by insisting they pass the phosphorus-based nutrient management legislation or face being called back this fall, should there be another outbreak of Pfiesteria, for an emergency session to pass the nutrient management legislation.

With the governor and all Legislative positions open for elections this fall, an outbreak of Pfiesteria could create political havoc.

What the passage of the act means for Pennsylvania farmers and others who farm along the border of the states is not known.

Currently Pennsylvania and Maryland hold reciprocity agreements for nutrient management. What effect the new law would have on those agreements remains to be seen.

feed to 1 pound of weight gain. "Today we run 2.8:1. We use 20 percent less feed.

"We also took out the copper-sulfate from the ration. We (Hostetter Management Co.) as an industry hired a swine nutritionist (with a doctorate degree) to become as efficient as possible with feed and nutrients, and still provide a plentiful supply of food.

He expressed concern about phosphorus-based nutrient management plan mandates. He suggested that technological applications should be sought out that provide long-term benefits and industry survivability, not short-term plans that may not work, but could destroy the existing efficiencies.

Turp Garrett said that, as the county extension agent in the middle of a press-hyped controversy over pfiesteria fish kills and an abundant poultry industry (they had a strong swine industry, but lost that several years ago), he has received many strange phone calls, on top of the more normal calls concerning the issue.

He said the public misunderstanding that serves to generate political motivation is very evident. He said he heard from one person who had a tourist guest stay at their place on the banks of the Pocomoke River ask if it was a risk to her health if she breathed the air outside.

Worcester County has 474 farms with 108,000 acres of cropland. There are 35,000 acres of corn, 42,000 acres of soybeans and about 15,000 acres of wheat.

The biggest income producer is the broiler industry, he said.

Egg Quality Program, While Successful, Still Has Room For Improvement

ANDY ANDREWS

Lancaster Farming Staff
GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.)

— Before the Salmonella Pilot Project began in 1992, 44 percent of all outbreaks of Salmonella Enteritidis (SE) in the nation could be traced back to Pennsylvania layer flocks.

Since then, that's changed.

In 1992, 38 percent of the 70 flocks in the program tested environmentally positive for SE. Twenty-eight percent of the samples were positive.

A few years later, that also changed.

In 1995, just three years after the project's beginning, through the efforts of study and eradication, 13 percent of the flocks tested positive. Only 3.2 percent of the samples were positive.

As a result, we've "drastically reduced the load in the houses of SE," according to Marlin Heneger, head poultry inspector with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Using the standards set up through the Hazard Analysis Critical Control Points (HACCP) guidelines, with the combined efforts of an array of industry and research associations, the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program or PEQAP has gained a nationwide reputation for its significant progress in reducing the threat of SE to humans.

PEQAP, according to Heneger, has "gained the recognition as the most progressive HACCP-type production program in our country."

Heneger spoke to about 100 poultry sales and service professionals and agri-industry representatives Wednesday during the last day of a Penn State-sponsored Pennsylvania Poultry Sales and Service Conference at the Holiday Inn in Grantville.

Despite all the good news, however, in the last year, the number of flocks testing positive has gone up slightly, to 9 percent as of the end of March, according to the inspector. In the test year from July 1, 1997 to March 31, 1998, 1.3 percent of the samples have tested positive. There are 277 flocks participating in the program.

The reasons? "Statistically," said Heneger, "we're feeling a little bit of pain because of A.I. (avian influenza)." He noted that the testing, because of the quarantine restrictions in the zone in the northern part of Lancaster County, home to most layer flocks in the state, was not quite as regular as the protocol called for.

Though the test program remains quite effective, the inspector noted that 25 flocks in Pennsylvania continue to be environmentally positive. Of the 25, 14 tested positive the very first time they were tested.

Heneger blames the following on some reasons why flocks can still be testing positive:

- Layer houses aren't getting effectively cleaned and disinfected (C&Ded), and are holding a "reservoir" of pathogens, perhaps in areas such as corners of feed units, where the bacteria can still thrive.

- A possibility could be that there could be a low level of SE infection in pullets, and testing may not be sensitive enough to identify SE. Also, the stresses of moving the birds and placing them into production could contribute to picking up the bacteria.

- A large percentage of flocks

still testing positive come from layer complexes, he noted. In fact, 86 percent of those flocks testing positive the first time were in complexes. Still, 64 percent of flocks in the program are in complexes. Are we testing adequately? Is there something being overlooked? And is biosecurity being followed to the letter?

- Managers need to make a closer examination of water cups, feed boxes and feed corners, cleaning areas that could be suspected of carrying the bacteria more thoroughly.

- Rodent control. In the houses which tested positive for SE, the project trapped a lot of mice, said Heneger. In the positive houses, 84 percent of the mice tested positive for SE. When the lights go out, the mice flock to the feed areas, leaving droppings all over — and which are readily ingested by the birds.

In the end, maybe even the questions need to be re-examined. "Are we really asking the right questions, even in this business?" he said.

But what PEQAP found was significant — at least to those concerned about human health risks. The level of contamination stands at only 2.6 or 2.7 per 10,000 eggs. That equates to one egg in every ten 30-dozen cases.

In the end, the project was set out to be a "risk-reduction program," said Heneger. "We've been successful in moving in that direction."

Those 277 flocks participating in the program make up 85 percent of the state egg industry. "No other industry organization has anything near to that level of participation," Heneger said. "It says something of the industry. You people need to be commended. You have committed yourself in actively trying to do something about it."

But even the best efforts of the industry can go unnoticed if those who prepare food don't follow proper preparation procedures to stop foodborne illness.

Dr. Chuck Benson, professor of microbiology at the University of Pennsylvania New Bolton Center, recalled an incident in which a pancake house in nearby Maryland was shut down because of an SE outbreak. It just so happened that the cooks in the restaurant were cracking eggs at 4 in the morning for the breakfast rush at 7:30. The eggs sat out at room temperature for three and a half hours.

Even if the SE present in the eggs were small, the amount, at room temperature, doubles every 20 minutes. That's three generations in an hour, he said. So starting out with 10,000 bacteria could lead to millions and millions of bacteria.

Benson recalled how he visited a local market. He was looking at a case of eggs, filled to overflowing from the refrigeration case. Cases of eggs were sitting on the floor at room temperature. Benson claims he took pictures to show to his classes about improper storage. He even joked about how store management would "follow me around."

The point Benson was trying to make: SE control is "part of food safety and it's everybody's business," he said. At New Bolton, "we teach food safety as a group activity."

Benson, who works with the Salmonella Reference Center, a PADL Component with the School of Veterinary Medicine, spoke about his work since 1969 with the bacteria. He said that there are more than 2,500 different Salmonella serotypes — but there are only 10-12 "we worry about medically," he said.

Salmonella organisms can be carried and colonize in chickens, dogs, cats, humans, snakes, though some carry a certain preference for particular animal species. But some Salmonella can wreak "havoc in human intestines," Benson said.

Benson focuses on the disease as it affects humans. There are three ways humans can display an infection:

- Enteric fever. This affects humans only. It's also known as typhoid fever. It is an invasive organism that colonizes the Peyer's Patches (the lymph nodes inside the intestine) and spreads through the body. It creates a condition in the body of malaise, fever, nausea, diarrhea, abdominal tenderness, cough and delirium. It can manifest itself as rose spots on the hands. It's treated with antibiotics.

- Septicemia. This rare condition amounts to only about 1-2 percent of all cases. It creates lesions everywhere on the body, almost like acne. It is often associated with defects of the host defense mechanism.

- Gastroenteritis. This is the most common clinical syndrome. Whether someone contracts this condition depends on how much of the bacteria is ingested. The incubation period is 4-48 hours. It has a sudden and violent onset. Benson said, "Everybody has... had a close, personal experience with gastroenteritis" at one time. Symptoms include headache, chills, fever, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, and general muscle pain. It lasts from one to four days. Death is possible for the very young, very old, and immunosuppressed. Many can get over the infection, however, without treatment, Benson noted.

Marlin Heneger, head poultry inspector with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, left, spoke to about 100 poultry sales and service professionals and agri-industry representatives Wednesday during the last day of a Penn State-sponsored Pennsylvania Poultry Sales and Service Conference at the Holiday Inn in Grantville. Dr. Chuck Benson, professor of microbiology at the University of Pennsylvania New Bolton Center, also spoke at the conference.

The dangerous thing about Salmonella is that animals or human can act as carriers but manifest no signs or symptoms, but can transmit the bacteria to others. The acute state can last from several weeks to several months. But the chronic stage can be dangerous. "Typhoid Mary," who transmitted the disease to thousands of people in the Northeast, was a chronic shedder. "She was a cook," he noted.

Benson noted that so many resources are used in the industry to combat the threat. "This beast is something that will keep a lot of people busy for a long period of time," he said.

Salmonella is the leading cause of foodborne illness, according to Benson, who quoted a story from Newsweek Magazine. There were 50,906 cases of salmonellosis reported to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta, Ga. in 1987. Across the country, according to CDC, 47 percent of those infected died at various sites across the country — more prevalent than E. coli, of which only 6 percent died.

Benson indicated a "new kid on the block" is being watched by researchers: Salmonella typhimurium DT104. It's an invasive, indiscriminate pathogen that can infect cows, pigs, chickens, and humans.

The industry knows that in the chain, from source to consumer, every chain relates to personal hygiene — observing biosecurity, keeping eggs refrigerated, cooking them appropriately, and importantly, "get people to wash their hands," Benson said. "This will significantly decrease the number of Salmonella going around."

Mike Smullens, growout manager with Empire Kosher Poultry, Inc., spoke about the importance of turkey brooding. One key to environment control is knowing the exact temperatures necessary for turkeys in different stages of development. Some growers have invested in an infrared temperature gun. A quality gun, according to Paul Patterson, assistant professor of poultry science at Penn State and one of the event coordinators, costs about $170.

There were 140 registered for the two-day event, according to R. Michael Hulet, associate professor of poultry science at Penn State, and a program coordinator.

Suiza Foods To Purchase DFA Joint Venture

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Dallas-based Suiza Foods Corporation announced early in February a definitive agreement to acquire Johnson City, Tennessee-based, Land-O-Sun Dairies LLC, a joint-venture partner of Dairy Farmers of America (DFA).

The transaction is valued at approximately $287 million.

Land-O-Sun Dairies operates 13 fluid dairy and ice cream processing facilities in Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Illinois, Kentucky and Virginia.

Last year, Land-O-Sun reported revenues of approximately $464 million. Land-O-Sun produces and markets products under the Pet and Flav-O-Rich brand names.

The acquisition, which is subject to customary closing conditions, is expected to be completed during the first quarter.

Dairy Farmers of America's president and chief executive officer Gary Hanman said the transaction marks the beginning of an important alliance with Suiza Foods.

"Suiza Foods has experienced tremendous growth in Class I fluid milk sales in the past couple of years and those Class I milk sales are crucial to our member farmers' success. Dairy Farmers of America will continue to supply raw milk to Land-O-Sun and we look forward to providing the growing raw milk needs of Suiza Foods."

Suiza Foods chairman Gregg L. Engles said that Land-O-Sun is a strong, well-run dairy business that complements existing manufacturing and distribution assets of the company. He added that dairy farmers are a critical link in the supply chain for all Suiza plants. "We look forward to building a broader relationship with Dairy Farmers of America, as Suiza grows in the dairy processing sector," he said.

Suiza Foods has leading positions in the dairy, plastic packaging and packaged ice industries. Its principal holdings are in fluid dairy processing, refrigerated, shelf-stable and frozen food products, packaged ice and plastic containers, and include Suiza Dairy and several other subsidiaries.

Dairy Farmers of America began operation on January 1, 1998, with the consolidation of four dairy marketing cooperative Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI), Southern Region; Mid-America Dairymen Inc. (Mid-Am), Milk Marketing Inc. (MMI), and Western Dairymen Cooperative Inc. (WDCI).

The new cooperative has 22,000 members in 42 states. DFA markets more than 38 billion pounds of milk, supplying bottling and manufacturing plants that produce a complete line of dairy products for consumers in the United States and around the world.

Poultry Fundraiser Features Performance By Mamas And Papas

as entertainment for Wednesday night's banquet. Normally the salespeople get together in the fall to look at half a dozen videos of entertainers and vote on the entertainment for the banquet. This year in the vote, the legendary American folk/pop band The Mamas and the Papas won an extremely close tiebreaker with country singing legend Tammy Wynette, who died unexpectedly in early April.

According to John Hoffman, the Federation's executive director, if Wynette would have won the tiebreaker "we'd be scrambling for other entertainment," he said. Fortunately the Federation secured the legendary band from the '60s, with such hits as "California Dreamin'," "Monday, Monday," "Dream a Little Dream of Me," and "San Francisco."

With 14 top 40 hits, the "ethereal" melodies of the folk band are known to all ages and are a part of our music culture, the Federation indicated.

A special treat is the opening performance of the popular stand-up comic, Dick Hardwick, whose zany performances include harmonica, drums, and washboard, according to Hoffman.

At the banquet, two people will be recognized for their efforts in the industry.

The past year, the Federation has been "mostly embroiled with the industry's work to control and eradicate A.I.," said Hoffman. But the Federation has been helping with other poultry health problems in other ways, including work on food safety.

An overview of the year's accomplishments in the Federation will be provided at the banquet, including the Hazard Analysis Critical Control Points (HACCP) work with processors. Work with the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP) and their accomplishments to help stem Salmonella incidences will be reviewed.

Also, Hoffman noted this is the "last banquet" for the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation as it stands. As of June 1, it becomes the Poultry Council with the PennAg Industries Association. Smaller ag organizations are being placed together, Hoffman indicated, to make the industry larger and "improve strength and numbers."

On June 1, the board of directors of the Federation will be the Executive Committee of the Poultry Council in PennAg Industries.

Industry members can celebrate their accomplishments with dinner and entertainment at the annual Pennsylvania Poultry Federation Fundraising Banquet at the Hershey Convention Center. This year's entertainment features the legendary American folk/pop band The Mamas and the Papas from the '60s, with such hits as "California Dreamin'," "Monday, Monday," "Dream a Little Dream of Me," and "San Francisco."

Hoffman said, "We're carrying the entire organizational structure into that council."

The Federation numbers a total of 700 members. The largest number of members are in the layer industry, followed by broiler and turkey industry members.

The convention center is located along Rt. 322 in Hershey.

Tickets at $150 each are available from the Federation at 500 N. Progress Avenue, Harrisburg, PA 17109, (717) 652-7530.

Upland Farm Named Historic Angus Herd

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — The Upland Farm Inc., Chester Springs, Pa. has been named a Historic Angus Herd by the American Angus Association for having been in the continuous production of registered Angus cattle, in the same family, for more than 50 years.

John Kramer, who is now deceased, started the herd in 1946. Early guidance was given to him by Herb Schiffer, a fellow Pennsylvania Angus breeder. The herd was built with Bandolier bulls, and the foundation cows became predominantly Bandolier breeding on both sides of the pedigree.

Today the herd is owned by John Kramer's children — John Kramer Jr., Barbara Riuta and Heather Johnson. A special certificate, signed by the president of the American Angus Association, has been presented to the family in recognition of the herd's historic status.

Annual Ryegrass Field Day Set

KEEDYSVILLE, Md. — A field day/pasture walk will be held from 10 a.m. to noon on Wednesday, April 22 here at the University of Maryland's Western Maryland Research and Education Center (WMREC).

The field day will focus on the use of annual ryegrass to increase agricultural profitability for livestock producers. Seventeen ryegrass varieties and triticale are being managed under both a pasture system and a cut and carry system to evaluate yield, palatability, winter hardiness, and management considerations necessary for highly effective use of this promising new forage in this area.

Exhibitors Asked To Get Ready For Fair

PHILADELPHIA — "Be a winner in the 1998 Pennsylvania Fair home grown and home made competition," urges Beverly Gruber, CFE, chairman of the competitive exhibits for the upcoming fair to be held at the Philadelphia Park Race Track on May 14 - 25.

Potential exhibitors may enter their creative work in a wide variety of classes outlined in the 1998 exhibitors handbook. All home grown and homemade products produced by the exhibitors are welcome at the fair. Categories of entries include home baked products, canned products, needlecraft, arts, crafts and photography, hay and grain, vegetables, nut, fruits and berries, Christmas trees, floral exhibits, as well as homemade wine. The 68-page guide lists possible cash prizes and rules for entry, display and removal of exhibits. First, second and third place cash prizes as well as ribbons will be awarded to each class. A "Best of Show" ribbon will also be given in each general category. For your official 1998 exhibitors guide, write to P.O. Box 5, New Tripoli, PA 18066 or call 610-767-5026.

Entrants are reminded that they can enter only one item in each class, and are encouraged to pre-enter their items to avoid the last minute rush. By submitting your entries ahead of time, the processing becomes quicker and easier for both participants and the Fair officials, but it is not mandatory. Actual entries must be brought to the Philadelphia Park Race Track building on Wednesday, May 13 between the hours of 1 and 7.

Four special classes will also be held in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Fair. Nearly $1,600 in premiums will be paid out in the "Blue Ribbon Apple Pie Contest," the "Land O Lakes Butter Best Cookie Contest," the "Cheesecake Contest" and the "Decorated Wreath Contest."

Alpaca Jubilee Scheduled In New Jersey

AUGUSTA, N.Y. —What comes in 22 different colors, produces one of the world's finest fleeces, and hums? You'll find the answers to these questions at the second annual Alpaca Jubilee, being held Saturday and Sunday, April 18 & 19, at the Sussex County Fairgrounds in Augusta, N.J. Almost 200 alpacas will be on display, brought by breeders from 14 states.

Alpacas, and their cousins, the llama, have been domesticated for over 5,000 years in South America. Yet the alpaca has only been in the United States since 1984. These animals produce a fine cashmere-like fleece, once reserved for Inca royalty. Alpacas have a loveable disposition and are gentle enough to be handled by children. They communicate with each other through body posture, tail and ear movements, and a soft, humming sound.

The Jubilee provides an opportunity to see both the suri and huacaya breeds of alpacas, and learn more about them at the many free seminars being offered to the public. Topics include uses of alpaca fiber, barn and pasture requirements, start-up strategies and showmanship classes. There will be hands-on demonstrations of spinning and weaving, as well as fleece shearing. Fleece judging will take place on Saturday, April 18. The Performance Classes will also occur on that day. These consist of obstacle courses, which require the alpacas to maneuver bridges, ramps and jumps. In the Youth Class, the alpaca handlers must be 18 years of age or under. It's a joy to see how the children interact with their animals and are able to lead them through the various obstacles.

A highlight for the breeders, as well as the public, will be the Halter Class Show held on Sunday, April 19, from 9:00 to 4:00. Ribbons will be awarded to the highest placing alpacas in classes divided by breed, age and color. A number of free seminars are also being offered on Sunday.

Both days you will have the opportunity to see the alpacas and talk to the breeders, who will be more than happy to tell you about the pleasures of raising alpacas and answer your questions. Many breeders will also have animals for sale. Bring your checkbook. Alpaca prices range from $10,000 to over $40,000.

Admission to the Fairgrounds is free, as is parking. Food will be available and vendors will be on the Fairgrounds with various alpaca-related products. Hours are 9:00-5:00 on both Saturday and Sunday. Plan

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

a trip to the Eastern Alpaca Jubilee and bring the family, but leave your pets at home as they are not allowed on the Fairgrounds. The Jubilee is wonderful way to spend a Spring day. When you leave you'll understand why alpacas are known as "The Treasure of the Andes," and why they are ideal investment animals for small Eastern farms.

'Forage Suitability'

FORAGE SUITABILITY GROUP

Deep, channery, well drained, strongly acid, moderately steep upland soils by wet and dry growing seasons Long term average yields given above are reflective of a 20 percent decrease in yield over soil groups having a high AWC

Management: For best forage production lime should be applied occasionally to keep the pH at approximately 6.5 when soil tests indicate a need See surface pH yield adjustment table, page 5 Lime requirement for these soils is moderate Three to six tons of lime per acre are needed to correct a previously unlimed soil to 6.5 Maintenance applications of 0.5 ton to one ton per acre may be called for intermittently when pH falls to 6.0

These soils are low in organic matter if tilled for a typical crop rotation grown in the MLRA On permanent pasture or hayland these soils may have a moderate organic matter content of 2 to 4 percent In either case, non-legume forages will respond well to nitrogen fertilizer applications Split apply nitrogen to grasses based on expected yield for the current cutting or grazing period Excess nitrogen leaches out of the root zone during winter dormancy due to the surplus 18-21 inches (460-524 mm) of precipitation above evapotranspiration levels and what the soils can store Refer back to water balance graphs for Coudersport and Johnstown on page 2

Response to phosphorus (P) fertilizer applications on unfertilized but limed soils is low to moderate Liming the soils tend to make the native P more available damping the response to fertilizer P except when applied as a starter fertilizer for new seedlings

ACRES of Soybeans in Lancaster County, PA

• You currently pay a $50 administrative fee for the CAT disaster coverage.

• You will pay approximately $130 for the same coverage under the proposed bill.

DAYCO SUPER II V-BELTS

Now there's a belt that beats the toughest drive problems.

Many heavy-duty industrial machines demand more than conventional wrapped v-belts can stand. Their punishing drives make ordinary belts crack under pressure. The result: unnecessary and expensive downtime.

Now there's a solution to the consistent costly problem of replacing or retensioning belts. It's the revolutionary new Super II™ v-belt from Dayco. The Super II v-belt was designed specifically for the most brutal applications. And its performance blows the cover off conventional wrapped belts.

In heavy torque, high horsepower and extreme shock load conditions, it's not even a contest. The Super II v-belt is stronger, more flexible, and lasts far longer.

Innovative design & construction provide extra strength and stamina.

The secret to the Super II v-belt's durability is its unique construction. The central position of the polyester cords in the neoprene rubber core provides greater strength, balance and longer life. Multiple fabric plies top and bottom enhance flexibility. And Dayco's unique raw-edged construction gives it a better grip for controlled slippage.

These attributes combined make the Super II belt superior to conventional wrapped belts in every way.

Test the Super II v-belt on your toughest drive.

The Super II v-belt was field-tested for two years on the most severe applications: rock quarry shaker screens, lumber mill tree debarkers and pipe descenders. In every case, it outperformed conventional wrapped belts by a wide margin. But the only test that really counts is the one you do on your own equipment.

Try the Super II belt on your toughest drive problem. You'll be so amazed by its incredible endurance that you'll want to put it on all your drives. In fact, we're so sure you'll be pleased with the performance of the Super II v-belt that in the unlikely event you're not satisfied, we'll refund the original purchase price, or replace it with a conventional wrapped v-belt.

Dayco's unique raw-edged belt sidewalls grip pulleys better, minimizing belt slip, noise and drive vibration.

Hi modulus polyester cord located in the belt mid section is specially treated to maintain extreme belt loads & shock without stretching.

Multiple fabric plies relieve stress on the load-carrying center cord, allow greater flexibility. A belts have three plies top and bottom. B belts have four and C belts have five.

Special 100% neoprene rubber compound supports cord more evenly top and bottom, dissipates heat more easily and provides more oil, heat and ozone resistance.

FORAGE SUITABILITY GROUP

Deep, channery, well drained, strongly acid, moderately steep upland soils

Response to potassium (K) fertilizers is low. These soils naturally tend to have available K in the optimum range or above for their cation exchange capacity values. Legumes harvested for hay will benefit most from K fertilization to replace that which is lost by harvest removal.

When taprooted legumes are grown, a compatible and adapted cool season grass companion crop should be planted to cut down on frost heave losses or provide a fallback hay or pasture crop in the event frost heave reduces the legume stand anyway. The grass will also provide slightly better erosion control cover as well.

Forage yields for this soil group are constrained most by low pH and lack of nitrogen fertilizer applications when legumes are absent from the crop rotation or the forage stand. Second limiting factor is the AWC during dry years or prolonged dry spells during the growing season.

Large cattle and horse pastures with slopes above 15 percent will have a worsening distribution of grazing pressure as slopes increase to 25 percent if a single water source is located at either end of the elevational scale. Areas remote to watering facilities (greater than 800 feet away) will be underutilized. Meanwhile, areas within 800 feet of the watering facility will be utilized with increasing intensity as the water facility is approached. For even grazing pressure distribution, place watering facilities at intervals along the entire elevational gradient. Paddock layouts should have long axes parallel with the slope. Place a water trough in each. Sheep grazing pressure distribution is not noticeably affected by elevational differences in a pasture located on this soil group unless they choose a bedding ground area on a knoll.

Design cattle lanes serving paddocks to reduce their slope length and steepness while maintaining efficient paddock layout and fence length. When necessary to climb the slope, place regularly spaced water bars or diversions across the lane to deflect water off it. Direct and extend them as needed to prevent diverted water from coming back on the lane downslope. Heavy use lanes require surfacing if rilling becomes evident.

Place brace assemblies for wire fences everywhere sharp breaks in grade occur. If steel T-posts or fiber glass rods are used, place a wood post every 50 to 100 feet on hillslopes with vertical curvature to keep the lowest stretched wire parallel with the ground surface while preventing these more flexible and shallower set posts and rods from tipping or bending.

When reseeding forages on these channery soils, drilling is preferred to broadcast seedings. Drills achieve more uniform stands by deflecting most rock fragments away from the drilled row. Broadcast seedings that are lightly tilled or culti-packed afterwards often have channers overlying seeds that cause stem breakage during emergence. Untilled broadcast seedings will have many exposed seeds. This causes seedlings to emerge unevenly or germinate and desiccate due to poor soil coverage and excessive drying due to lying on partially or completely exposed rock fragments. Drill openers and coulters tend to wear out quickly and may break on occasion. Use the maximum recommended seeding rate for the species or mixture being planted.

The "Blue Ribbon Apple Pie Contest" will be held on Saturday, May 23 at 2 p.m. in the Pavilion area. Entries need to arrive by 1:30. The pie will be judged on overall appearance, the color, flavor, texture and doneness of the crust, the consistency and doneness of the filling, and creativity. The recipe must accompany the entry. The top prize in this contest is $500.

The "Land O Lakes Butter Best Cookie Contest" will be held on Saturday, May 16. Again entries need to arrive by 1:30 p.m. and will be held in the pavilion area. Cookies will be judged on taste, originality, creativity, appearance and ease of preparation. A $500 check goes to the winner of this contest.

The "Cheesecake Contest" entries need to be entered on May 20 by 6:45 p.m. A $250 award will be given to the winner of this class. The cheesecake must be made from scratch and may have a topping.

'Forage Suitability' Something That Can Be Plotted, Used By Producers

First cut hay is difficult to field cure without rain damage due to high humidity and significant rain events occurring within 3 days of each other. Later cuttings are less likely to be rain damaged, but in wetter years, may also be damaged by rain and long exposure to sun while field curing. Tedders or inverters will promote more even, quicker drying of the hay. An option to consider is harvest as haylage. Haylage production reduces the amount of drying time needed and will thus yield a higher quality forage if ensiled and stored properly. Ordinarily, haylage can be wilted and harvested between rain events.

Management Dynamics: Liming these acidic soils will allow for a wider selection of suitable forages and lead to increased forage production on previously unlimed soils. Depending on the forage species grown, increasing the surface soil pH to 6.5 will increase yields 20 percent for tall warm season perennial grasses to as much as 100 percent for alfalfa. Cool season grasses will yield 50 percent more. Legume persistence will be increased.

Using facilitating practices of fencing and watering facilities to control livestock movement as mentioned above will better distribute grazing pressure. This will prevent areas of over-utilization and under-utilization from developing. Over-utilized areas will evolve into low-growing sod formers and weedy rosette plants (dandelions and

Deep, channery, well drained, strongly acid, moderately steep upland soils (plantains). Bare areas will appear between plants in advanced stages of decline. Underutilized areas will tend to evolve toward taller growing species. In more remote areas near wooded borders, woody vegetation, such as blackberry, prickly ash, and sumac, invade. Underutilized areas will have more dead leaf and seed stalks than more closely grazed areas.

Since these soils are low in organic matter, they supply little mineralized soil nitrogen. Hence, non-leguminous forages respond well to nitrogen fertilizers. If grasses and non-leguminous forbs are yellowish green in color and urine spots are much darker green than their surroundings, nitrogen fertilizer is needed. Forage production can double.

Site Documentation: Similar forage suitability group - G-127NY400PA. Deep, well drained, strongly acid, moderately steep upland soils. Nonchannery phase of the same soils on D slopes (15-25 percent). Higher AWC gives them production capabilities approximately 25 percent better than G-127NY401PA. The absence of significant amounts of channers makes seedbed preparation easier, requires less equipment maintenance, and improves seedling survival. Post setting is also easier.

Philip Keeney Named 1998 Penn State Distinguished Alumnus

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Philip Keeney, professor emeritus of food science and a researcher so identified with ice cream that he is known nationwide as "The Emperor of Ice Cream," has been named a 1998 Penn State Distinguished Alumnus, the University's highest alumni award.

"Philip Keeney has devoted more than 40 years of service to the food processing industry," says Robert Steele, dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences. "His work with ice cream and confectionery products over that time proved to be of major significance to the food industry and to agriculture as a whole."

Keeney, a native of Cedar Grove, N.J., is renowned within the ice cream industry for his breakthrough research on how fat emulsions affect the structure of ice cream during freezing. He also made significant contributions to research on the textural properties of corn syrups and developed microcrystalline cellulose as a texture and structural agent in ice cream.

After serving as a U.S. Army Air Corps B-24 bombardier from 1943-1945 in the Pacific Theater of Operations during World War II, Keeney entered the University of Nebraska, earning a B.S. in dairy technology in 1949. He worked as an assistant manager of a milk-drying plant in Winthrop, Minn., from 1949 to 1951. He earned an M.S. in dairy technology from Ohio State University in 1953 and earned his doctorate in dairy science from Penn State in 1955.

Keeney joined the Penn State faculty in 1955 as an assistant professor of dairy science. He was promoted to associate professor in 1962 and became a full professor in 1966. He became a member of the food science department when Penn State designated the dairy manufacturing major as part of the food science program in 1975. He served as food science department head from 1980 to 1985.

Keeney was director of the Penn State Ice Cream Short Course from 1955 until his retirement in 1985. The short course, which expanded during Keeney's tenure, attracts ice cream professionals from every state and many foreign countries. Keeney continues to help teach the course every year.

Keeney also directed Penn State's research on the chemistry of the cocoa bean and other chocolate-related projects from 1962 until his retirement. His research — which took him to such countries as Honduras, Brazil and Malaysia — centered on how post-harvest processing of cocoa beans affects chocolate flavor. In 1985, the cocoa research program was perpetuated with the establishment of a $1.5 million endowment from the chocolate industry to study the molecular biology of cocoa.

Keeney developed and taught introductory undergraduate food science courses and developed graduate courses on product development and ingredient technology. He has been profiled as Penn State's emperor of ice cream in such media outlets as People, the "Today" show and the New York Times. He also presented an educational program on ice cream for the Smithsonian Institution's "On The Mall" series.

Keeney is a life member of the Penn State Alumni Association and is serving his third, three-year term on the board of directors of (Turn to Page A47)

Artists Piece Together Fabric, Creativity In Stunning Display

LOU ANN GOOD

Lancaster (Lancaster Co.)

— Lancaster County is often thought of as the quilt capital of the world with its prolific array of quilts primarily made with those of Amish and Mennonite heritage. But the 11th annual Quilters' Heritage Celebration held recently at the Lancaster Host Resort and Conference Center, Lancaster, reveals that quilting is not only a local but an international art.

The four-day event featured an awesome array of quilts made by quilters around the world. Quilters from Australia, Belgium, Japan, Korea, Norway, Portugal, Israel, South Africa, Spain, Switzerland, the Netherlands, and the United Kingdom intermingled with thousands of people across the United States.

Quilts on display were not the traditional patterns most often displayed in the county. Instead most of the quilts were like paintings with quilt artists piecing together the subtle shadings adding detail and dimension.

Many quilt artists dye their own fabrics. Fabric used to create these works of art were pieced, layered, stitched, and stuffed using innovative techniques and color combinations. Some used vinyl cloth, ink, and photography techniques to show the possibilities fiber artists are able to create.

A special exhibit by Quilt National featured 21 pieces of a traveling exhibit. These works of art were an original design of the entrant, not a variation of an original design of another artist. Quilt National was organized as a showcase for art quilts and is housed in a renovated dairy barn. The Dairy Barn Southeastern Ohio Cultural Arts Center is open 12 months at 8000 Dairy Lane, P.O. Box 747, Athens, Ohio 45701.

But intriguing designs were not only those on display. Many of the crowd wore hand-crafted coats, shirts, sweaters, dressers, and skirts that showed their own individual ingenuity in incorporating quilting into their wardrobes. It was an informal fashion show just to watch the crowd that gathered at the Host for the show.

A planned fashion show was also part of the special events. Organized by the Fairfield Processing Corporation's Diamond Celebrity Fashion Show, it showcased 950 original, one-of-a-kind wearable art garments.

While many come to admire the displays, others come to learn. Classes, complete with sewing machines, were held for hands on learning. Participants could experiment with sewing machines with 13 different quilting stitches to give a hand-quilted look. How to draft patterns and innovative ways to construct, and embellish quilts. Trapunto, pattern stippling, cording, and tips for successful hand quilting, diagonal seam techniques to transform squares and rectangles into complex patchwork units, and many other unique designs for novices to accomplished art quilters.

Lectures about historical quilts and present-day quilts.

Merchants selling quilting supplies, fabrics, patterns, button jewelry meet every need and stitchery-related fantasy imaginable.

Denim coats designed with an actual quilt insert on the upper back was one of the eye-catching fashions for sale. The coats were designed by Kaye Moore, 7609 Greenlawn Rd., Louisville, KY 40241.

A special exhibit called the Bovine Challenge included quilts with patches titled "Moo Juice," "Holy Cow," "Cow Pie," "An Udder Failure," and other "udderly bovine captions."

Cash awards totalling $12,000 were distributed to top winners in the juried and judged show.

Perhaps you missed this year's show. To make sure you hear about next year's event, request your name be added to the mailing list. More than 20,000 names are on the list. For additional information about the Quilters' Heritage Celebration, P.O. Box 503, Carlinville, IL 62626. Phone (217) 854-9323. Fax 217-854-2209.

Compliments and Columblines by Karen Hull Slenk of Colden, N.Y., featured a crazy quilt block background with thread enhanced 3-D flowers.

Shirley Stevenson of Texas captures the beauty of barns and the rural landscapes that surrounds them.

Judy Schwarzmann of California stitched the above quilt. The magnificent quilt below is almost as realistic as sitting in the flower garden.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards) Joyce Bupp

It's a war zone out here. Guerrillas spy out in the bushes. Attacks wait outside the front door. And it's hardly safe to walk around the old barn.

But, then, that is the perfect spot for battle maneuvers. Lots of nooks and crannies for fox-hole-type hideouts. Rugged attack sites among straw mow fortifications. Temporary battle shelters behind sandbags....er, feedbags.

Luckily, despite the continuing confrontations, there have been no casualties. But the fur does fly on occasion.

That, I suppose, is only to be expected during the annual territorial battles among the farm's cats.

Cat squabbles have been relatively low key around here the last few years, due to a very small number of cats on the property. Two new additions — a couple of regular visitors — have escalated the squirmishes this year.

One probable reason is our out-of-whack ratio of three male cats to the one female residing around in the old barn.

Long-time resident Pest, the old gray-and-white tomcat, is senior of our feline set. Though he once was always underfoot — hence his name — Pest now mostly just hangs out around the calf barn waiting for the morning and evenings fills of the milk bowl. Despite his laid-back personality, Pest does get territorial when it comes to competitors moving in.

Which is part of the reason Midnight, more recent addition to the cat residency, cowers under the heifers' feed trough most of the time.

Midnight turned up one Sunday evening last fall, injured and half-starved, surrendering to the enticements of bologna and cautious petting. Several weeks of TLC (catfood, milk, a topical antibiotic and human attention) plumped and healed the beautiful shiny-black cat, but his checkered past and apparent abandonment left deep psy-cat-logical scars. Although Midnight loves being petted, he prefers it on his terms, and no cuddling, please. He's extremely wary of other cats, especially Pest in one of his more aggressive moods. Though Midnight finally did settle into being a barn cat, he's generally in hiding. And, the wild calls him back for occasional several-day forays to the woods and meadows.

Even more recent arrival is Butch, the charcoal-and-beige tabby donated by friends. Like Tigger of Winnie-the-Pooh fame, Butch bounces around the farm with great exuberance, turning up under my feet regardless of where I am or what I'm doing outside. His bad habit of using one's jeans legs as a climbing tree is under treatment. Few things intimidate Butch, save for housecat Monk, who despises all other cats and hisses Butch off "her" porch.

Into this array, plunk one hulking, aggressive, stray orange cat who skulks around the barn, zips through the backyard and occasionally scares the daylight out of me when I stumble across him snoozing in the straw mow.

The upstart of all this is that one never knows which feline will come streaking around a corner in pursuit of an interloper, or how long the growling, yowling and/or howling will persist.

Blissfully unaware of this is Calico, the young multi-colored female nonchalant about her role in keeping the cat pecking order in disarray. Mostly she just snoozes, curled up in the hay of one of the weaned heifer pens.

I picked her up this morning. And noticed that she seems to be gaining weight.

We may have an interesting-looking litter of kittens upcoming.

Avocado Egg Salad can easily be adapted to suit your taste. Because egg salad does not require precise measurements, you don't need to be afraid to experiment.

Get Cracking With Egg Salad

There's nothing like the onset of balmy spring weather to whet our appetites for a chilled salad—especially if it offers our palates a welcome zing and provides needed nutrients without excess fat.

Colorful, flavorful, nutritious and easy to prepare, Egg Salad Italia fills the bills. The contrasting soft cream-colored pasta, crisp green zucchini and pungent red onion echo the colors of the Italian flag and with fresh mushrooms and Italian seasonings, form a tasty combination of favorite Italian foods. Sunny hard cooked eggs add protein to give the salad main-dish status.

For this quick salad or for sandwich fillings and snacks, it's helpful to keep hard-cooked eggs on hand. Once cooked, they'll keep nicely in the refrigerator for a week.

Take a look at these recipes and you'll be surprised that egg salad can be made in so many unique ways. Making egg salad is not a precise science, so don't be afraid to experiment.

MARVELOUS MAKE-AHEAD SALAD

1 quart bite-sized pieces salad greens
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 cup chopped celery
10-ounce package frozen peas, separated
¼ cup minced onion
10 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese, divided
2 cups bottled buttermilk dressing

On bottom of large salad bowl or 13x9x2-inch baking dish, evenly distribute salad greens.

Evenly layer green pepper, celery, peas, and onion over greens. Reserve center slices from 1 egg for garnish. Layer remaining egg slices over vegetables. Sprinkle with ½ cup cheese. Spread dressing evenly over salad and sprinkle with remaining cheese. Cover and chill to blend flavors. Garnish with egg slices. For each serving, serve a portion on all layers.

¼ cup small gherkins, chopped
¼ cup stuffed olives, chopped
¼ cup juice (from gherkins and olives)
8 hard cooked eggs, chopped
¼ cup lemon juice
¼ teaspoon sugar
1½ cups mayonnaise
½ teaspoon salt (or to taste)
Tabasco to taste
Worcestershire to taste
Soak gelatin in cold water. Dissolve in hot olive and gherkin liquid. Add all other ingredients and pour into a mold to congeal. Serve on lettuce leaves with cold, sliced corn beef, tomatoes, rye bread, and iced tea or beer.

BACON DEVILED EGGS

12 hard cooked eggs, shelled, halved
1-2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
3 slices bacon, cut into small pieces

Remove yolks and place in bowl. Add mustard and mayonnaise, salt and pepper to taste. Mix well.

In fry pan, fry bacon until crispy. Remove from pan and drain well. Crumble into small pieces. Add to yolk mixture. Blend well. The consistency should not be runny.

Fill into holes of egg whites. Sprinkle with a little paprika. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

Answers To Often Asked Questions About Eggs

How long will eggs keep?

Fresh shell eggs can be kept refrigerated in their carton for at least 4 to 5 weeks beyond the pack date. Quality losses should be insignificant if the eggs are refrigerated as soon as possible after purchase from a refrigerated case. If let to sit out, eggs will age more in one day at room temperature than in one week in the refrigerator.

Store eggs in their cartons because eggs can absorb refrigerator odors. Refrigerate hard-cooked eggs in their carton as soon as they are cooled and use within a week.

Raw whites will keep up to four days if refrigerated in a tightly covered container. Unbroken raw yolks, covered with water in a tightly covered container in the refrigerator, should be used within one or two days.

Can eggs be frozen?

Eggs cannot be frozen in their shells, and hard-cooked whites will become tough if frozen. Hard-cooked yolks and raw whole eggs, whites, and yolks can be frozen successfully.

Use freezer containers, seal tightly, label with the number of whites, yolks, or whole eggs, and the date. When frozen, yolks will become thickened or gelled so they need special treatment. Stir 1/8 teaspoon salt or 1 1/2 teaspoons sugar or corn syrup into each 4 yolks. Note on the label whether you've added salt (for use with main dishes) or sweetener (for baking or desserts). The thawed product may be somewhat thicker than it would be if made with fresh eggs.

To freeze whole eggs, beat just enough to blend yolks and whites. Egg whites need no special treatment before freezing. If you like, freeze each white in an ice cube tray, then transfer the cubes to a freezer container.

Thaw frozen eggs overnight in the refrigerator or under running cold water. Use yolks or whole eggs as soon as they're thawed. Once thawed, whites will beat to better volume if allowed to sit at room temperature for about 30 minutes.

Hard-cooked yolks can be frozen to be used later for toppings or garnishes. To cook them, carefully place the unbroken raw yolks in a saucepan and add enough water to come at least 1-inch above them. Cover and bring just to boiling. Remove the pan from the heat and let the yolks stand, covered, in the hot water 15 minutes. Remove them with a slotted spoon and drain well before packaging and freezing.

Are fertile eggs more nutritious?

Fertile eggs are not more nutritious than nonfertile eggs. They do not keep as well as nonfertile eggs and are more expensive to produce.

Is there a difference between brown- and white-shelled eggs?

No. Shell color is determined by the breed of the hen and is not related to quality, nutrients, flavor, or cooking characteristics. Since brown-egg layers are slightly larger birds and require more food, brown eggs are usually more expensive than white.

What causes blood spots? Small spots of blood (sometimes called "meat" spots) are occasionally found in an egg yolk. These do not indicate a fertile egg; they are caused by the rupture of a blood vessel on the yolk surface during formation of the egg. Most eggs with blood spots are removed during the grading process but a few may escape detection. As an egg ages, water moves from the albumen into the yolk, diluting the blood spot. Thus, a visible blood spot actually indicates a fresh egg. Such eggs are suitable for consumption. The spot can be removed with the tip of a knife, if you wish.

What are the stringy white pieces in egg whites?

These rope-like strands of egg white, call chalazae (ka-LAY-zee), are not imperfections or beginning embryos but a natural, edible part of the egg. They keep the yolk centered in the thick white.

Why do some hard-cooked eggs have discolored yolks?

This harmless greenish ring is due to an iron and sulfur compound which forms when eggs are overcooked or not cooled quickly.

Why are some hard-cooked eggs difficult to peel?

Fresh eggs may be difficult to peel. Those which have been stored for a week to 10 days before cooking will usually peel more easily. To help make peeling easier, cool the eggs immediately and thoroughly in cold water after cooking. To remove the shell, crackle it by tapping gently all over. Roll the egg between your hands to loosen the shell, then peel, starting at the large end. Hold the egg under running cold water or dip it in a bowl of water to help ease off the shell.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Our peas are beginning to grow. This year I planted four kinds as we usually do in the spring. I've also put in twice as many onions as usual because I could not buy a smaller amount.

My husband made almost 100 small newspaper containers to start seeds. The equipment and instructions were a Christmas gift. He shared a lot with our daughter as she and her young son have a garden in New Jersey. He has started so many cabbage and broccoli plants under lights in the basement. And, he won't even eat cooked cabbage.

Recently, I gave away some of our cats and kittens. It was hard to part with them as I helped to raise them. But, we had accumulated too many as they lived in our heated garage. Let's hope they will be happy on their new dairy farm home. They were black, black and white, grey and white and several calico ones.

Allen built another blue bird house for a post in our yard. We believe that all three will be occupied as there are many bluebirds in our yard each morning.

The other day the pussy willow tree that I ordered arrived. There are two burning bushes to be planted somewhere too. The question is where to put them so that they will have the best chance to grow. So many of the azalea bushes that I've planted have not survived. Maybe they

PITTSBURGH (Allegheny Co.) - The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program (PDPP) was asking young fans if they've "got milk?" last month as thousands of high school basketball fans poured into Hershey Park Arena to cheer on their favorite boys and girls basketball teams.

Eight hundred children under age 12 were given free "got milk?" T-shirts, sports nutrition brochures and milk sport drink recipe cards as part of PDPP's sponsorship of the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association's (PIAA) state basketball championships. Basketball programs also contained fun puzzles, dairy trivia, and nutrition information aimed to entice boys and girls to drink more milk.

"We wanted the kids to associate milk with the good nutrition it takes to become a high school state basketball finalist," said Holly Gerke, coordinator of the PDPP and PIAA sponsorship. "The hard work and dedication of high school state champions and dairy farmers is a natural connection for dairy promotion. Good nutrition that includes dairy products is an important part of any athletes regular training program."

PDPP was the underwriting sponsor of the basketball broadcasts shown in media markets throughout Pennsylvania. "Got milk?" commercials appeared at regular time-outs for those viewers who watched the games at home.

Area dairy princesses assisted with the PDPP sponsorship of PIAA by passing out thick milkshakes to children attending the games. These children then had the opportunity to pose for a free milk mustache picture and receive a plastic cup to remind them to get the calcium they need.

Sports enthusiasts can read about the results of the championships on PIAA's website at www.piaa.org. When moving the cursor over the "got milk?" banner, fans can activate the connection to the MilkPEP website, www.whymilk.com for additional milk and sports nutrition information.

PDPP concluded its sponsorship of the 1997-1998 school year with the basketball championships. They also underwrote the state football championships held in Altoona in December.

PDPP contracts with the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East to conduct advertising, marketing and nutrition education on behalf of dairy farmers in 33 counties in western and north central Pennsylvania.

Third Graders Attend Classes At Hershey Farm

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — About 260 third graders found the farm is a great place for schooling last week. As part of the social study curriculum, students from seven Manheim schools visited Hershey Brothers Farm operated by Dale, Steve, and Clair Hershey.

Groups of students took turns visiting five different learning stations on the farm. At learning station I, Lancaster County Dairy Princess Elizabeth Smith, Alternate Elisa Ranck, and Laura Welk, ambassador, taught dairy nutrition. Graybill's Dairy donated milk for each participant.

Learning Station II, taught by Steve Hershey, was called "Follow the Milk From The Cow To The Tank."

And Learning Station III, taught by Dale Hershey, was in the dairy barn where students heard about "Housing and Feeding Cows."

Derek Hershey lead Learning Station IV in the calf barn, where students were delighted to see the nursery for baby calves.

Clair Hershey taught "Agro-nomics and Farm Safety," at Learning Station V.

Dorothy Myer organized the four day event. She and her husband Carl live on a dairy farm and raise potatoes, so she knows the importance that students learn where food comes from.

"I try to pick out the best spokesperson for each commodity," she said.

Assisting in teaching students about farm life was Joe Mayer, agronomist, and Tim Markowitz, sales manager for Pioneer Hi-Bred Seed of Mount Joy.

Carroll Barton, retired nutritionist for Esbenshade Farms taught poultry.

Herb Hoover, buyer for E.K. Bare, showed the students what it takes to grow the perfect potato.

Barry Geib, farmer and sales technician for White Oak Mill taught about hogs.

In addition, each student is given a bagged filled with things to remind them of the importance of farm. The items are donated by local businesses: McCracken's Feed Mill, pencils, G&G Feed and Supply, rulers, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Myer, litter bags; National Pork Producer's Council, coloring books and bookmarkers, Middle Atlantic Milk Market (MAMMA) coloring books, milk recipe pamphlets, and milk stickers; and Keystone Farm Credit, fact sheets on cows.

Sporting Hill third graders, Heather Eiker, Ariel Seachrist, and Samantha Witmer drink milk after learning that they should drink four servings a day.

Search Begins For York Dairy Princess

YORK (York Co.) - Once again, the Pennsylvania dairy industry is seeking candidates to serve as County Dairy Princesses in their local area throughout the State. All single young women from a dairy background or with an interest in the dairy industry should consider devoting a year of their spare time helping to further the interests of that industry in their home county. York Dairy Princesses will be selected on June 20, at the York County 4-H Center, Bair.

The winner will serve the dairy industry of York for one year beginning on July 1, 1998. She will make appearances at schools, malls, and grocery stores and have the opportunity to speak to civic clubs, senior citizens groups, farm and non-farm audiences. In addition, she will represent the dairy industry in parades and at fairs and will represent York County at the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Pageant in Harrisburg in September.

The winner of the York County pageant will attend three days of training at Lycoming College, Williamsport. Non-material benefits include tremendous personal growth, development of self confidence and speaking ability, the opportunity to travel and meet new friends.

Any single woman between 16-24 years of age, never married, whose parents or guardians are engaged in dairy farming or are employed in a dairy related industry is eligible to compete for the title. A young woman is also eligible if she, herself, is employed as above or is the owner of at least two animals of the six major dairy breeds in a bona fide 4-H or FFA project prior to May 1, 1998. Anyone interested in entering the York County Dairy Princess contest should contact Gail Thoman at 1886 Dunkard Valley Road, Dallastown, PA 17313 or phone (717)428-1832 by April 30.

We also need girls to vie for the follow titles (age as of July 1, 1998): Little Miss Dairy (ages 4-6), Dairy Miss (ages 7-12) and Dairy Maid (ages 13-15).

Milk Promotion How To's Taught

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff
DENVER (Lancaster Co.) — Maybe she's shy. Maybe she's unskilled and unknowledgeable about dairy promotion, but within a few months a dairy princess becomes a competent spokesperson for the dairy industry.

That's because the people behind the dairy princess program have the stuff that makes a dairy princess.

These people form the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc. (PDPPS). Headed by Jan Harding and assisted by Arlene Wilbur, PDPPS has a network of district coordinators and committee people dedicated to dairy promotion at the grassroots level.

To train the committee people, PDPPS holds bi-annual workshops in five different regions of the state. At these workshops, participants receive specific instructions on how to plan and carry out promotion at the local level.

Much of this training is in overseeing the local dairy princess program. While the program has traditionally catered to females, Wilbur said, "We have several young men interested in dairy promotion. One county has several 18-year-old males working as ambassadors. We want their participation. They make excellent spokesmen for dairy farmers."

The male issue is a topic that PDPPS will need to address.

In a recent day-long meeting held in Denver for the southeast section of the state, committee members were given the tools and inspiration needed to make promotion easier and more effective.

Carolyn Weaver of Dairy Council in Southampton showed extensive materials the Dairy Council makes available for use in schools. Books, videos, classroom curriculum, and props include outstanding graphics, and colorful, creative layouts filled with facts and figures.

"These materials teach nutrition in creative ways in play format," Weaver said.

In addition, Dairy Council has educational brochures that explain the truth about lactose intolerance and other controversial issues that dairy princesses are often questioned about.

"You don't need to reinvent the wheel. We have lots of information from the Dairy Council to effectively get the message across," Weaver said.

Jayne Seabright and Rebecca Sonnen of Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA) told how the checkoff money goes for advertising. A coordinated method for promotion has been worked out recently.

"DMI advertising targets kids and MilkPEP advertising targets teens and adults," Seabright said.

Video clips of the new "Got Milk?" ads created for kids and by kids were shown for participants to review.

"If you don't understand them, that's because you're not suppose to," Sonnen said. "Kids made them and love them."

Sonnen talked about the Youth Soccer Campaign used to reach participating on soccer teams with the message: Drink Milk.

"Dairy promotion is essential to sell more milk and improve the farm image to the consuming public," Wilbur said.

Participants were given news release forms, official entry forms, presentation and speech guidelines, nutrition information, and information about some of those often overlooked issues such as insurance to cover promotional events.

Extensive paperwork is required to chronicle promotions so that princesses can receive reimbursement through incentive awards.

Wilbur apologized for the paperwork but said, "To succeed one must learn in life to follow guidelines and rules."

Wilbur cautioned committee members to keep the program fun and to be flexible. "Use dairy maids and alternates so that the responsibility does not become overwhelming to your county dairy princess," she said.

The effectiveness of PDPPS would not be possible without the financial assistance of businesses. In addition to providing a $1,000 scholarship for the state princess, Sire Power offers $100 to each active county promotional program.

In addition to the meeting held in Denver for the southeast region, similar meetings were held for the southwest region at New Stanton, the northwest region at Clarion, the central region at State College, and the northeast region at Wyalusing.

Tammy Balthaser Weaver, industry relations director for the Pa. Beef Council, encouraged participants that they can make a difference and make their efforts

A former dairy princess herself, Weaver credits much of her expertise in the public relations field to the training she received in the dairy princess program.

"No other industry matches the dairy industry for the involvement of producers promoting their own product," she said. She noted that committee persons seldom receive recognition for their many behind the scenes work to do the program.

She encouraged them not to become discouraged. "You are enriching many people's lives,"

Charlene Ranck

Weaver said.

Attitude shows in everything we do, Weaver said of the hectic responsibilities many people handle. She encouraged committee people to assess their attitudes before contacting businesses and people when setting up promotions, because our attitudes show in our voices.

The quality of life can be improved by your attitude according to Weaver who lives by the philosophy: Life is 10 percent of what happens to you and 90 percent your attitude towards it.

Pa. State Grange Names Young Couple Of Year

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Grange recently named Mark and Patti Sveda of Irvine its 1998-99 Young Couple.

What's remarkable is that the rural couple hasn't been active very long with the Grange, and only recently decided to make time to participate.

According to the couple, knowing last year's Grange young couple and desiring a better life for themselves provided the inspiration to become involved.

The Svedas went from hardly participating in Grange activities to applying for and being named the Pa. State Grange Youth Department's young couple of the year, during an annual Young Marrieds/Young Adults weekend getaway held at the Gettysburg Days Inn.

The Pa. State Grange Youth program is for young adults ages 14-35. It places emphasis on the development of leadership skills, recreational activities, community service and working to make Pennsylvania a better place to live.

The Pa. State Grange is an agricultural, rural and community service organization dedicated to improving the lives of rural Pennsylvanians through legislative action, offering member services and participation in community affairs.

"It's been a slow start," Patti said, "but we're ready to climb that hill and get active, and this seemed like a good place to start."

According to the Svedas, their best friends who live nearby, Jim and Terri Wertz, inspired them to become involved.

Both couples are members of the Brokenstraw No.407 Subordinate Grange in Youngsville, and last year the Wertzses were the state Grange young couple.

According to the Svedas, seeing the fun and effect the title had upon their friends convinced the Svedas to forward their names for consideration for the honor — even if they didn't win, they couldn't lose.

"(Winning) was somewhat unexpected," Mark said, "But we saw how happy Jim and Terri were and we decided to go for it."

Patti said, "They said it was a very good experience and we would have a wonderful time. I think being involved with the youth is going to be a wonderful experience."

Mark said he expects that they will grow from the experience.

"I feel we will become more outgoing and active instead of standoffish and taking a wait-and-see attitude toward participation,"

Mark said.

"Being in front of people will also help us be better public speakers," he said.

They are to get many opportunities to develop public speaking skills.

In addition to serving on the Youth Department Committee during the coming year, they are to represent the Grange Youth Department at Grange Leadership School in June; at the state session to be held in Crawford County in October; at the national session in Greensboro, North Carolina, this fall; and at the 1999 Pennsylvania Farm Show in January.

Additionally, they are to make visits as the state young couple to various subordinate and Pomona Granges across the state to discuss the programs.

Mark said their goal is to increase participation by all rural youth and eligible members.

"We will try to get more young people to join Grange by talking to them and teaching them about the Grange," he said.

Mark, a laborer at a local tire company, and Patti, a secretary with a local petroleum company, said they will be putting some energy into drafting another Brokenstraw couple to be considered for the next young couple selection.

Since the Svedas are the second consecutive couple from the same

Grange to be named state young couple, they said they were going to work on getting another couple from the Brokenstraw Grange to apply.

Popcorn Can Be Healthful Treat

POPCORN CAN BE A HEALTHY, TASTY TREAT
Movie-style popcorn made news last year because of its mount of fat and sodium. Many microwave popcorn manufacturers now offer one or more lower-fat lines, and most have replaced saturated coconut and palm oils with the less saturated oils. Here are some tips to make your popcorn feasts nutritious: Look for "lite" popcorn, which usually has half the fat of regular popcorn. "Lite," though, doesn't always mean low fat, so check the label. Don't be fooled by healthy-sounding names. Again, check the label for number of calories and fat grams. Choose a popcorn made with liquid oil rather than with partially hydrogenated oil, which contains both saturated and trans fatty acids. While this doesn't reduce calories, it is kinder to the heart. At the movie theater, choose the smallest container possible and skip the buttery topping. Share with a friend. Make your own low-fat popcorn; start with plain kernels and an air-pop machine. Choose yellow kernels if you want volume and white kernels if you want fewer problems with hulls. Season to taste with garlic or onion salt, chili seasoning or Parmesan cheese.

What Smells?

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) - Your nose will probably save your life many times - for instance, when it tells you that something is burning, that cooking gas (which contains an added noxious chemical) is leaking, or that your chicken salad sandwich has spoiled. The olfactory sense also gives great pleasure, from the aromas of a good meal to the scent of a lover. Though it's an intimate and essential part of our lives, the sense of smell is the least understood of our senses. Here are some of the facts:

1. Though the human sense of smell is far less developed than that of other animals, a person with a healthy sense of smell can detect as many as 10,000 different odors.

2. Much of your sense of taste depends on your sense of smell. Thus when you hold your nose or have a cold, you lose much of the flavor of foods.

3. Women tend to have a keener sense of smell than men, and it's particularly acute at the time of ovulation.

4. Your sense of smell is heightened when you're hungry.

5. Smoking seriously impairs the sense of smell. In fact, smoking may cause long-term damage to the olfactory system, which can take a long time to recover once you quit smoking.

6. Odor perception seems to peak around age 40, though some studies suggest that it starts to decline in some people at age 20.

7. Half of those over age 65 and 76% of those over 80 have a reduced ability to smell (called hyposmia). Not only is there a decline in the ability to detect odors, but also in the ability to identify them, though this decline varies highly from person to person. The reasons for the loss include neurological changes; certain chronic disorders (such as Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, or hypothyroidism); use of medication (such as anti-histamines, pain killers, or steroids); and the cumulative adverse effects from years of smoking or drinking.

8. It's estimated that 4 million Americans have problems with their sense of smell and/or taste, not related to aging. Each year 200,000 of them seek medical help for this, most complaining about a lack of smell (anosmia) or odd smells (phantosmia).

9. One out of every 20 people suffering a head injury experience a loss of smell and/or taste.

10. You have a dominant nostril, just as you have a dominant hand. If you're right-handed, your right nostril will be more sensitive, because of greater nerve sensitivity on that side.

11. Odor preferences vary in different parts of the world, depending on cultural and/or genetic variations.

12. If you are constantly or repeatedly exposed to an odor, your ability to perceive it will usually decline - this is called adaptation. This decrease in sensitivity can last for up to three weeks after the odor is removed, according to research at the Monell Chemical Senses Center in Philadelphia. People are more likely to adapt to an odor if they believe it is a natural essence, rather than a potentially hazardous chemical, even when they are being exposed to exactly the same odor.

13. About 85% of people have childhood memory linked to a particular aroma, according to one survey (most commonly mentioned was the fragrance of baked goods). Memories triggered by an odor tend to be more emotionally intense and evocative than those linked to other sensory cues

Wrinkle-Free Skin?

BLOOMSBURG (Columbia Co.) — If it's wrinkles that are worrying you these days, shake off those worries.

Skin care specialists have discovered a new, all natural tissue nutrient that appears to closely mirror that of the neutral lipid portion of the skin's stratum corneum.

Studies have shown that the fatty acid composition of emu oil, a food by-product, contains a unique ratio of C-16 saturated and C-18 unsaturated components. These components allow rapid diffusion into and moisturization of dry and/or aging skin.

In understanding the major changes that occur in the lower layer of the skin, it is known that approximately 20% of the dermal thickness is lost in elderly individuals. This may account for the paper-thin skin that appears as one ages. There is a decrease in the amount of elastin fibers which provide elasticity to the skin, causing the skin to be less resilient.

Emu oil as a topical moisturizer and tissue nutrient helps aging skin have the ability to reverse skin dryness and sealing by enhancing the ability of the skin's upper layers to retain water. By penetrating into the epidermis and stimulating epidermal growth, emu oil rejuvenates the skin rete ridges and enhances the thickness of the dermis.

Dr. Peter Pugliese, 1997 recipient of the Maison G. DeNavarc Medal, stated in Emu Today and Tomorrow magazine, "I did a relatively small study on the emu oil and found several things. One is that emu oil is definitely a penetrant. Emu oil has a proliferative effect; it causes cells to divide..."

In recent years the trend in skin care and anti-aging programs has been to combine harsh noxious chemicals such as glycolic acid/alpha hydroxy to facial cleansers. These chemicals have one task: to literally burn the top layers of skin off your face. Once these layers of skin are burned off the face, the more tender, soft skin is exposed, giving the illusion of younger looking skin.

With the newly discovered emu oil, burning of the skin is no longer supported or encouraged by the makers of Advance Revelations in Longevity emu oil products. "The logic is 'why burn your skin?' when you can safely and naturally have beautiful skin without first harming it," says Joanne Long, of Advance Revelations in Longevity, and founder of the Emu Oil Institute.

Our product line is light years ahead of the antiquated notion of the old 'lash and burn' skin care programs of the past. With emu oil containing a mixture of fats which is nearly identical to the fat profile of the human body, it is the most exciting tissue nutrient to hit the market in years," Long confides.

Although emu oil is still a well kept secret, Long predicts consumers will be hearing more and more about these revolutionary new products in the not too distant future. "Once people try it, they love it. I have customers who panic when they're running out of emu oil products and demand we ship to them overnight," says Long. Long even reports that one gentleman customer in California who just celebrated his 65th birthday and swears his friend think he's only 50 years old; he uses emu oil on his face religiously each morning.

Surgeon Cautions Farmers To Practice Safety

Dr. William Ives talks about farm safety and the need for farmers to always be on their guard.

LOU ANN GOOD

Lancaster Farming Staff
EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) —

The season of busy field work is in progress. Farmers have a lot more on their minds than thinking of safety and health care.

"When we are tired and busy, we lose our guard with kids and are prone to do things we wouldn't do otherwise if we weren't in a rush," said Dr. William Ives, an Ephrata surgeon.

He reminds parents that constant vigilance is necessary when working around children.

Ives has treated children who drank cleaning agents in the milk house because it looked like a cup of milk. Severe esophagus burns result from drinking cleaning agents and can leave permanent damage and even cause death.

"You must think of it (cleaning agent) as a loaded gun," Ives said. "It hurts only if it is improperly handled."

Ives also warns against potential tractor and lawn mower injuries.

"When mowing the lawn, a child should not be in the lawn," Ives said of the danger of flying objects escaping from beneath the lawnmower.

Ives knows first-hand how dangerous tractors can be.

"I almost killed myself on a tractor," he said of his efforts to use a tractor to pull out a truck that was stuck. The tractor did raise up but fortunately for Ives went back into position instead of flipping.

Ives cautions farmers to always use a tractor with roll bars.

"My goal is to improve safety for plain sects in order to save lives," said Ives.

Ives grew up on a dairy farm in Connecticut, but became fascinated with the Amish when he came to the county in search of antiques. During his years of pursuing medical studies, Ives returned to the area frequently.

When he was younger, Ives intentions were not on becoming a doctor until he began volunteer ambulance work while in high school. He went on to Boston College, where he graduated magna cum laude. With no financial resources to pursue a medical degree, Ives enlisted in the armed forces where he received seven years of medical training in exchange for his services.

After a two-year residency at the Wilford Hall USAF Medical Center in San Antonio, Texas, Ives went on to a civilian residency with Geisinger Medical Center in Danville.

In that area is a large settlement of Amish, and Ives lived with an Amish family and even helped milk cows in the morning.

"The Amish are wonderful people living their religion. I'll never forget a busload of them leaving to help hurricane victims in the South," Ives said.

He also never forgot that many Amish had medical problems that they lived with because it was too expensive to have medical care without insurance.

Ives dream has been to live in an Amish and Mennonite community and offer surgical care at affordable prices for those who don't have insurance because of religious reasons.

According to Ives, many insurance plans often reimburse surgeons at lower than cost fees in order to pocket the money for its organization. Doctors often charge non-insurance patients with higher fees. Ives thinks that's unfair. He thinks non-insured patients should get a price break because there is little paper-work involved.

Ives recently set up his office at 21 N. State St. Ephrata. He has done much of the remodeling and refinishing wooden furniture himself. But the medical equipment is the latest, according to Ives.

Although he performs general surgery, Ives said, "My specialty is colon and rectal."

Ives is a firm believer in preventable illnesses. He said that colon and rectal are the most common cancers and are almost always preventable if caught early in the precancerous stage. He said that it takes 8 to 10 years for a polyp to turn cancerous.

For this reason he invested in a flexible endoscopy that works like a wide angle lens when inserted in the intestine and used to detect polyps in the colon. According to Ives the procedure is more reliable, painless, and much shorter in duration than the typical sigmoidoscopy ordered by physicians.

"It's worthwhile doing exams because cancer can occur anywhere in the colon rather than in the bottom part of the intestine, the area limited to examination by a sigmoidoscopy."

Consuming Thoughts

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.

Are you one of those people who always feels cold, even when others are comfortable? While you're searching for an extra sweater, consider this: you may not be getting enough iron in your diet. A study done by the U.S. Department of Agriculture shows that regulating and maintaining body temperature in the cold may depend on the amount of iron consumed daily. An inadequate amount of iron may leave you in the cold, literally.

Iron deficiencies have long been associated with feeling tired. But the study showed that women with inadequate iron in their diets may start feeling cold long before they feel fatigue associated with iron deficiency or anemia.

In the study, six healthy, young women consumed less than one-third the recommended dietary allowance of iron for a period of time, then replenished their iron for a period of time, then replenished their iron stores with daily supplements. When exposed to a cool temperature, the women lost 29 percent more body heat and produced 9 percent less heat after the low-iron period than after the supplemental period.

Women of childbearing age, pregnant women, and growing children are liable to suffer from iron deficiency and its consequences. It's estimated that more than half of American women aged 11 to 50 consume less than the recommended daily iron intake of 15 milligrams.

However, before you begin taking iron supplements or giving them to members of your family, talk with your doctor. It is possible to get too much iron, especially from supplements. Excess iron, over a period of time, can result in liver damage; in younger children accidental ingestion or misuse of supplements can cause iron poisoning. Speak with your doctor about the type and quantity of iron supplement you should take, if it is decided that you would benefit from one. Meanwhile, follow these strategies to increase the iron in your diet.

- Eat more iron-rich foods, including lean red meat, fish, poultry, liver, dried peas and beans, and leafy green vegetables. In fact, eating small amounts of meat, fish or poultry increases your body's absorption of iron from plant sources.

- Eat a food rich in Vitamin C along with the iron-rich plant foods. Vitamin C also helps increase the body's ability to absorb the iron. For example, eating an orange for lunch with a sandwich will help you absorb more of the iron in the bread.

- Go easy on the amount of tea consumed with your meals. Substances in tea called tannins may considerably reduce the amount of iron your body will absorb. Coffee, to a lesser extent, also reduces iron absorption. Save the coffee and tea for an hour before or after eating.

- Certain types of antacids can also reduce the amount of iron the body absorbs. If you use ROSEMONT, Ill. — In a major effort to help end the two-decade decline in fluid milk consumption, Dairy Management Inc.™ (DMI), along with its affiliated state and regional dairy promotion organizations, is launching an $81 million fluid milk marketing campaign designed to persuade children to drink more milk.

"DMI's consumer Segmentation Study conducted last year convinced us that children are among the most promising consumer segments in helping us increase fluid milk sales," said Herman Brubaker, an Ohio dairy farmer and chairman of DMI.

Market research shows that children 1 to 11 are the biggest milk drinkers, but that consumption drops off greatly after that. DMI milk marketers hope that helping children choose antacid regularly, talk with your doctor about other possible strategies to ease digestion problems and reduce the need for antacids.

- Use iron pots for cooking. High-acid foods, such as tomatoes, will leach some of the iron from the pot and possibly add substantial amounts of iron to your diet. (In one study spaghetti sauce cooked in an iron skillet for about 20 minutes had five times as much iron as spaghetti sauce cooked in a ceramic pot.)

- When choosing grain-based foods such as bread and cereals, look for whole-grain or enriched products. Certain B vitamins and iron are added back to enriched breads and flour. Keep in mind that your body does not absorb iron equally well from all food sources. So don't depend on a single source of iron; get it from a variety of foods.

Kids Got Milk

milk now will result in them forming a life-long milk habit.

"Using an integrated marketing approach to convince children that milk is an attractive beverage will go a long way toward reaching our goal of halting the decline in fluid milk consumption," Brubaker said.

The integrated marketing campaign features "got milk?" advertising with a new twist. Starting Feb. 2, new television commercials, featuring story lines written by and for children, are running on various cable and network children's programming during weekday breakfast hours, after school, and on weekend mornings.

"The purpose of the new 'got milk?' advertising is to raise kids' awareness of milk and position it as a contemporary, 'cool' beverage," said Charles Powell, DMI vice president of milk marketing. "The ads, which assume a kid's point of view, pose the question: what happens in a world where milk is taken away? We want kids to think, 'I need milk right now — nothing else will do.'"

An aggressive public relations campaign will support the advertising through news-generating activities and publicity in major consumer media outlets.

In addition, starting in April dairy farmer funds will sponsor "Wimzie's House," a Public Broadcasting System television show aimed at 2 to 5 year olds.

DMI and its affiliated state and regional dairy promotion organizations have additional strategies in the overall plan to reach children 1 to 11, including:

- Placing dairy-friendly nutrition education materials
- Sponsoring research that reinforces the value of milk products as the preferred source of children's calcium

- Conducting a new School Breakfast promotion campaign which stresses the importance of a breakfast that includes dairy as essential to learning

- Working with school foodservice personnel to properly handle milk

- Identifying new flavors, formulations and other marketing opportunities for milk-based beverages to help overcome barriers to increased consumption.

Fluid milk marketing efforts in 1998 extend beyond children to reach teens and those adults who currently drink only one glass of milk a day. An additional $100 million in milk processor dollars will be applied to a major campaign targeting the teen and adult groups, identified in the DMI Segmentation Study as critical to increasing overall fluid milk consumption.

"By pooling resources and implementing one, coordinated plan with MilkPEP, dairy farmers now have the firepower to successfully compete with soft drink manufacturers and other beverage competitors trying to win the hearts and minds of consumers, including children," Brubaker said. "This strategy, spearheaded by the new 'got milk?' campaign, allows the fluid milk industry to become the major player in the beverage industry in marketing to children."

Since the national dairy farmer checkoff program began in 1984, dairy promotion organizations have helped increase total annual dairy sales by 33 billion pounds, a 27% increase.

Dairy Management Inc.™ is the nonprofit domestic and international planning and management organization responsible for increasing demand for U. S. produced dairy products on behalf of America's dairy farmers. DMI manages the American Dairy Association®, National Dairy Council® and U.S. Dairy Export Council®.

Robesonia FFA Students Continue Successful Nursery

"We've sold out and we're ready to replant," said Steve Miller, agricultural science teacher and FFA adviser at Conrad Weiser High School in Robesonia.

The FFA has been raising disease-resistant American Liberty elms since 1992, has replenished their nursery once, has sold all its trees, and is ready to order another 300. "We plan to keep this going," said Miller.

Actually, they've saved one large elm to plant beside their new ag building, where they expect to move in the fall of 1999.

The American Liberty elm is a product of university research funded by the nonprofit Elm Research Institute (ERI) of Westmoreland, N.H. The Robesonia FFA is a participant in the Johnny Elmseed Nursery program offered by ERI.

Elm sales have allowed the Conrad Weiser FFA to install a drip irrigation system, order more elms, and fund the FFA treasury. With the next batch of trees, they plan to use proceeds from one-third of the elms to fund scholarships.

"It surprised me how well everyone takes to the American Liberty elms," Miller said. "We have no lack of volunteers for the elm tree nursery committee."

The committee is divided into groups that take care of fertilizing, watering and pruning the trees, training younger committee members, and taking customers orders. "Every student learns what the trees are and how they came to be," he said.

In a 1995 interview by Elm Research Institute Miller said the project had brought "nursery craft" to the school curriculum, and that both FFA members and other students were involved.

He described the project as "a combination of an old-fashioned nursery production program woven into what we like to think of as a modern science program."

The chapter sold many of its trees through mention in Elm Research Institute's newsletter, Elm Leaves. Because of the newsletter, we had calls from a radius of 100 miles greater than we would have had otherwise, said Miller.

The FFA chapter plans to send out letters to college and universities in the region when the next batch of nursery elms reach transplanting size. "I think many of them will want two or more for their campuses," said Miller.

He noted that Picatinny Arsenal in Mount Hope, N.J., received a federal award for its planting of 56 Liberty elms purchased from the high school.

In the 1970s, ERI sponsored research to save the American elm, which was threatened with extinction by Dutch elm disease.

By selecting American elm parent trees that proved their ability to fend off the beetle-borne fungus, researchers produced the disease resistant American Liberty elm, introduced for public planting in 1983.

The tree is a purebred American elm, not a hybrid. It retains the American elm's classic vase-like shape and grows well in urban conditions. It is the only disease resistant American elm that comes with a ten year warranty against Dutch elm disease. More than 250,000 American Liberty elms have been planted in more than 750 communities.

The American Liberty elm is distributed only through ERI and volunteer groups such as the Conrad Weiser FFA. If you would like to reserve a Liberty elm or help sponsor additional trees for the FFA nursery project, contact Steve Miller at (610) 693-8537 or visit ERI's site at <http://www.forelms.org>.

4-H To Host Environmental Education Program

Are you interested in learning about the environment? Do you want to learn how you can help your community address environmental concerns?

"Caring Keepers of Our Planet Earth" is the theme for a Mitsubishi-sponsored 4-H Environmental Ambassador Program set for April 27-29 and May 4-6. This program, open to boys and girls in grades 5-7, will focus on waste management and environmental issues. Program participants will stay at Appel Farm Arts and Music Center in Elmer.

"Funding for all educational program and activity supplies, lodging, meals, and transportation for participants is provided by Mitsubishi Motor Sales of America, Cumberland County Improvement Authority — Clean Communities Program, Rutgers Cooperative Extension and the New Jersey 4-H Development Fund," said Jeannette Rea-Keywood, county 4-H agent. "Therefore, this 'first-of-its-kind' in-New-Jersey, three-day environmental education program is free!

While at this conference, delegates will build their own mini-landfill and worm compost bin; tour a waste-to-energy plant, a landfill, and a composting facility; and much more."

Schools in Cumberland, Gloucester, and Salem counties are invited to send a delegation of 10 youth and two teachers or adults. Registrations are being accepted on a first-come, first-served basis.

For more information about the 4-H Environmental Ambassador Program, contact Jeannette Rea-Keywood, Cumberland County 4-H Agent, at (609) 451-2800.

yard. They are black with big black, juicy crickets. They are on each step to the clothesline. The crickets are on each night and the family kills them when they wake up. The family is looking for one of their children. Do

QUESTION — Margaret Diamond, Kunkletown, wants instructions to make lamps or other items from popsicle sticks.

QUESTION — Robert Rauhauser, Thomasville, is a researcher and historian and would like to know if some one might have some old round Hinkle's Easter dye bottles to complete a display of Egg Dyeing Apparatus. The dyes came six in a carton. He writes that the dyes were patented Aug. 24, 1943, which is amazing since raw materials and all efforts were going in to support the war effort. Rauhauser understands that the dyes were invented by a York County man from Wrightsville by the name of Raymond Young, who probably assigned his invention to the Hinkle Drug Store in Columbia. Hinkle's continue to sell egg dyes in square bottles, but Rauhauser wants the round bottles, the box they came in, and information on the inventor Young or the first Hinkle's Drug Store.

QUESTION — JoAnn Robbins would like to purchase
"Nancy Drew" books circa 1930s, 1940s, and 1950s. Contact

QUESTION — Mrs. Amos Hoover, Denver, wants to know who to contact about recycling plastic milk jugs into a picnic table.

ANSWER — Ruth Erb, Beavertown, wrote that she is allergic to most pesticides and wanted a natural way to get rid of either carpenter ants or termites in her basement. Thanks to Janet Spangler, York Springs, who writes that she had trouble with carpenter ants and called Penn State Extension. It recommended she purchase a spray from the hardware store and spray around the cellar wall outside the house. That was 35 years ago and she hasn't had trouble since then.

ANSWER — Bill Angert, Manheim, wanted to purchase a good family-owned Model A Ford sedan, coupe or pick-up truck made between 1928 and 1931. Thanks to Mike Baron, Fork, Md., for writing that he has a 2-door sedan in very good condition that runs like a sewing machine. Call him (410)

ANSWER — For Scott Ehrisman, Richfield, a reader sent information clipped from a newspaper, which talked about keeping groundhogs out of the garden. The article written by Harry Cobey, an avid gardener with a degree in agriculture, recommends locating the burrows and dumping well-used kitty litter into the entrance holes to make the critters move away. He also writes to fence in the garden and turn down the bottom foot of the fence flat along the ground to discourage the critters from digging under it. However, Scott wasn't complaining about only his garden but his whole farm being overrun by the critters. I suggest he call his county Penn State Extension office for help.

ANSWER — Robin from Elverson wants directions to make a room freshener similar to Jelly Jar Scent. Jim of The

ANSWER — Ray Hunsberger, Phoenixville, is restoring a United 2 1/2 HP type A Hit & Miss gas engine made in Lansing, MI by United Engine Co. and wanted information such as manuals, original paint color, etc. about the engine. Thanks to Mel Riehl, Strausstown, for writing that the engine was built by Associated Manufacturers of Waterloo, Iowa. United Engine Company was a sales company and did not manufacture engines. The shape and mounting of the water hopper, and the type fuel mixer are the major differences between United and Associated Engines of the same era. Most other parts are interchangeable.

According to "Wendel's Notebook," the engines were painted red (DuPont 2622) with the head and cylinder, silver.

Engine Supplies, 3403 Buckeystown Pike, Adamstown, MD
21710. Phone (301) 874-2821 and Hit & Miss Enterprises.
P.O. Box 157 Orwell, OH 44076. Phone (440) 272-5335.

"Amango Engines," which is the story of Associated Manufacturers Co., is an excellent book covering the Associated

of cookware from New Era, Inc., 1255 Paradise Hill Rd., Clarksville, TN 37040. Phone (615) 648-8016 Telex 70817.

ANSWER — C.N. Lockenbill, Schuylkill Haven is restoring a New Idea corn husker-shredder and wanted information to help him. Thanks to Dan Albright, Mineral Point, who writes that he has the original literature about this machine and will share it with him if he sends his address to 305 Blackburn Rd., Mineral Pt., PA 15942.

ANSWER — In response to E. Beaver, Rington, Janet Spangler, York Springs, writes that she sows red beet seed as early as she can whenever she plants peas, onions, and potatoes. She heard that you can sow the seed again in July for a second planting, but she hasn't ever tried it. She prefers Bur-pee's Red Ball beets.

ANSWER — Jean Imm, Reisterstown, Md., wanted a red paper back Spay cookbook printed in the 1950s or 1960s that

The Aushermans have decided to discontinue their dairy operation and will be selling a large group of young cattle. As you may remember, they had a production sale in October of 1996, and talking with the new owners they appreciated the type of cattle the Ausherman's had bred and developed. These are the same kind of cattle. Curtis also is a believer in BST and does use it in his herd management in the following manner; When cows have been fresh X-number days and body weight is analyzed, he uses it as he sees fit in his program.

COWS ABORT IF FED RYE.

If you are feeding RYE from the silo; Rye hay; grazing on Rye or bedding on Rye straw; look out for abortions & cows not conceiving when bred.

Occasionally; I get a call from a dairyman saying "I did everything I was supposed to do but some of my cows are still open."

In an attempt to find out why some cows were still open; I asked a series of questions from each dairyman that still had a few open cows & found that they had a common denominator. They were feeding Rye or bedding on Rye straw. When they took the Rye away; more & more cows got pregnant.

But what are you going to do with all that Rye? Sell it to someone who has steers. The steers will put on a lot of weight on the Rye grass feed.

I still need open cows. If you have taken away the Rye & still have open cows; call me.

Improving THE BOTTOM LINE

AIM<sup>TM</sup> TECHNOLOGY

RHA +3,500

Tom Powell and Cam Davis of Unicorn Associates, Union Bridge, Md. milk 140 holsteins.

Tom & Cam introduced the AIM Technology into their nutrition program in October of 1996. Since that time, their RHA has gone from 19,863 to 23,115! That's a 3,500 increase in just under 18 months!

"The AIM Technology is very flexible allowing us to work with many different forages and commodities. AIM provides us with high quality bypass protein giving us a consistent amino acid profile. We feel this has been instrumental in helping us to achieve quicker and higher peaks in all age groups."

Tom and Cam work with Farmer's Co-op in Frederick, MD and are very pleased with the service and expertise they are receiving. Their salesman provides them with timely and pertinent information and they especially appreciate the fast turn around on forage samples and ration balancing.

Certainly BST has played a part in their success, although they were using it prior to starting with the AIM program. Probably more important, is their attention to details such as planning their forage needs, and managing harvest and storage to ensure top quality. Their facilities are not the best, but with top management and paying attention to the cows, they are seeing super results.

In addition to their success with the AIM Technology, Tom and Cam have seen a lower SCC since adding Master Plex plus to their ration. This has enabled them to take advantage of more quality premiums on their milk check. More and better milk, now that's performance.

Poultry Disease Research Could Lead To New Vaccine

NEWARK, Del. — Sometimes science takes unexpected turns. When University of Delaware scientist John Dohms began studying a microorganism that causes respiratory diseases in chickens and turkeys, he didn't think his research would have human as well as veterinary use. But his work may provide a piece in the puzzle to find a cure for Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome (AIDS).

Dohms, a microbiologist in the department of animal and food sciences, and colleague Dr. Calvin Keeler, professor of molecular virology, are exploring the genetic structure of Mycoplasma gallisepticum with the goal of developing a poultry vaccine. But in a satisfying twist of events, the team now finds itself in the position of providing information to AIDS researchers.

"It's funny how that happens," Dohms said. "For years I've been following studies on mycoplasmas done by Dr. Joel Baseman at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio. Although Baseman now focuses on mycoplasma species found in AIDS patients, he blazed a trail for our avian research. I never thought we'd be sharing our findings with him."

Mycoplasmas, the smallest known self-replicating organisms, have been found in plants and insects as well as in poultry and humans. In people, they are the primary cause of atypical (walking) pneumonia and certain urinary tract infections, and some species are believed to be co-factors in AIDS. Since mycoplasmas infect specific organisms, however, they cannot be passed from poultry to humans or vice versa.

M. gallisepticum, the species that infects poultry, works its way into the tracheal tissue, weakening the bird's defense system and opening it to further viral and bacterial infection. The disease causes decreased growth rate in broilers and turkeys, as well as drops in egg production in laying hens.

The economic damage can be catastrophic. Infected poultry is unusable and must be destroyed. A few years ago, the disease nearly wiped out a multimillion-dollar U.S. poultry supplier.

"Although the disease has been eradicated for the most part in turkeys and broilers in the United States, in other countries it continues to be a major chronic problem," said Dohms. "And here in this country the bacteria still infect laying hens that pass it on to their chicks. Many backyard flocks carry it, and it can be spread to poultry from infected house finches."

Mycoplasmas are difficult to control by conventional means, Dohms said. Antibiotics have so far been ineffective against them. Existing vaccines, which contain mild strains of the organism, can protect poultry from getting the full-blown disease but do not prevent infection.

"Mycoplasmas are specialized, having adapted to fit a respiratory and reproductive tract niche," said Dohms. "Unlike most bacteria, they have no cell walls, and are bordered instead by only a membrane. They contain between 470 and 670 genes — compared to the 2,000 or more genes of typical bacteria — but they have all the genetic material they need to reproduce independently."

Mycoplasmas are one of the rare microorganisms that have the ability to glide, Dohms explains, and in some cases are able to swim upstream. After entering the infected animals' respiratory tract, M. gallisepticum attaches itself to the cilia, the hair-like tissue on the chicken's trachea. Dohms suspects that it also works its way inside the host cell, where it thrives, hidden from the immune system.

Dohms' preliminary work examined how the bacteria attaches to the respiratory tissue of its host. Using a combination of molecular biology approaches and more conventional electron microscope techniques, he isolated two cytohesins — attachment proteins — on the tip of the mycoplasma cell.

Dohms and Keeler are now experimenting with attacking the mycoplasma at the site of attachment. Using recombinant cytohesin proteins as vaccines, they hope to coat the respiratory tissue with antibodies to prevent the bacteria from attaching and penetrating.

In a parallel study, Ph.D. candidate Trish Whetzel, animal and food sciences, is working with Dohms to identify the mycoplasma's virulence genes — the parts that are critical to causing infection. The researchers have developed the technology to randomly insert foreign DNA elements into the M. gallisepticum genome, inactivating specific genes.

"We're trying to find the Achilles' heel of the bacteria — the right part to attack — so that an effective vaccine can be developed," Dohms said.

Weeden Received Promotion

GENEVA, N.Y.—Norman F. Weeden was promoted to full professor in the Department of Horticultural Sciences at Cornell University at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y.

"Weeden is an excellent cooperator and a leader as we enter the era of bioinformatics," said Hugh C. Price, chairman of the horticultural department. "He has pioneered the development of genetic mapping for peas and apples, which has broad application in plant science. He has shown how molecular biology can be used to expand our understanding of the plant genome."

Weeden was an early adopter of molecular techniques to develop genetic maps of horticultural crops. Today he is a recognized specialist in the use of plant genetics. The current focus of this research is the use of molecular markers to tag genes in a number of cultivated species for marker-assisted selection purposes. A highly saturated genetic map for pea has been developed under Weeden's leadership. Markers have been identified for genes that confer or contribute to the resistance to seven viral or fungal diseases affecting peas. Weeden is chair of the Linkage Map Committee of the Pisum Genetics Association that coordinates mapping efforts in peas worldwide.

"I am honored to have received this promotion," said Weeden, "and very appreciative toward Cornell and the faculty that they find my work useful and interesting." Weeden further explains that plant genetics is a hot field in biotechnology. Through DNA analysis, one can manipulate simple inherited characteristics to help understand more complex ones. He has done most of this work studying peas "because peas represent a good model system for what I am trying to investigate, plus they are easy to grow and cross," he said.

The work Weeden is performing is of great use to commercial growers in developing more efficient crop breeding practices. One of the most important projects is to develop pea varieties tolerant to common root rot, which is caused by a fungus and considered a significant problem in the Northeast. If crops are not properly rotated, the fungus becomes abundant in the soil and will kill pea plants before they produce seed. It is extremely hard to directly screen for the various genes that influence tolerance and susceptibility, but by "tagging" these genes with easily scored DNA markers, one can make crosses, select for the markers, and develop new varieties with a high level of tolerance.

Weeden has co-invented a machine for DNA extraction—a machine that breeders can use on their own to prepare DNA samples. The machine takes 96 samples at a time and crushes them in less than five minutes using electromagnetic force. The resulting extracts, after dilution, are ready for PCR, where specific genes are multiplied so that their presence can be easily detected by chemical screening. Five laboratories around the world are testing the machine.

assistant professor in 1982 and was promoted to associate professor in 1988.

Weeden is a member of the American Society for Horticultural Science, the American Genetics Association, the Botanical Society of America, and the Society for the Study of Evolution. He has served as associate editor for the Pisum Genetics Association since 1992 and associate editor of "The Journal of Heredity" since 1987. His numerous publications discuss the development and applications of DNA and molecular markers, among other topics.

Residents Learn About Water Quality

HACKETTSTOWN, N.J. — Two recent workshops educated citizens in Hunterdon and Warren counties using forest buffers to protect water quality.

Sponsored by the North Jersey Resource Conservation & Development Council (RC&D) and the Musconetcong Watershed Association, the separate workshops each carried the same agenda and speakers.

Designed to inform landowners and municipal officials about the benefits of establishing buffers along rivers and streams, the workshops explained how using a zone of trees and other vegetation, or riparian forest buffers, can reduce or prevent soil erosion, nutrient runoff, and improve stream health and wildlife habitat.

Fred Kelly, water quality specialist with the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service, described how riparian buffers enhance water quality by maintaining the cooler water temperatures needed for optimum trout production with the shade from streamside forests.

Acting as a buffer, Kelly explained how the vegetation also absorbs nutrient runoff such as nitrates and phosphorus, along with sediment from agricultural fields, before they can enter the waterflow.

Kelly also discussed funding opportunities available to establish buffers. USDA cost-share programs that help landowners establish conservation practices on their property include the Environmental Quality Incentives Program and Wildlife Habitat Incentives Program.

Matt Hall, project specialist with the North Jersey RC&D reviewed the Musconetcong Buffer Inventory that he prepared two years ago, as well as the demonstration tree planting where volunteers planted 3,000 trees to establish a riparian buffer on a three-acre site owned by the Division of Fish, Game & Wildlife last spring.

Donna Drewes, coordinator for the North Jersey RC&D stressed the importance of municipal officials understanding the need for riparian forest buffers to maintain the water quality in all communities. Drewes gave examples of ordinances that have been passed requiring buffers to be planted alongside new housing developments, noting that land use planning and regulations need to have preservation and protection strategies to maintain the overall health of rivers and streams.

Carole Stober, a Lebanon Township resident who attended a workshop, owns about 900 feet of river frontage along the Spruce Run Brook. As a master gardener and a water steward with the South Branch Watershed Association, she is interested in keeping her town green.

"I am worried about new people coming in and not understanding about water quality," Stober said at the conclusion of the workshop.

National Farmers Union Urges Lawmakers To Distinguish Between Children Who Are Exploited And Children Who Work On The Family Farm

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — National Farmers Union (NFU) asked that lawmakers acknowledge the vast difference between children who are being exploited in agricultural production and those who work on their parents' or neighbors' farm when making new laws. NFU's recommendations coincide with today's release by the General Accounting Office of a report on children in the agricultural workplace.

"Children who work with their families on farms benefit from learning new skills, developing confidence and learning how to earn money," said California Farmers Union President Scott Magnuson who submitted testimony on behalf of NFU at the forum on Children in the Agricultural Workforce, held here today. "However, the dangers of children in the workforce outweigh the benefits if children are only being used as a cheap substitute for jobs that should be performed by adults."

Magneson, who with his family operates a dairy farm south of Sacramento, said that NFU opposes using children as part of the agricultural workforce if it means taking children out of school or if the children are forced to live in conditions that are substandard.

"For those who grow up on a farm, working side by side with other family members is part of daily life. One of the key reasons people choose the occupation of farming is to enable them to work together as a family," Magnuson said.

Magneson also said that children hired by neighboring farm families to help with milking or harvest are rarely among those who are exploited. "These children are treated like family members, and in many rural communities, these jobs are eagerly sought after," he said.

In his testimony, Magnuson said that a vertically integrated multinational food conglomerate is NOT a family farm. NFU defines a family farm, not by size, but by structure. NFU policy states: The family farm is a unit using land and other capital investments operated by one farm operator and his or her family who provide the management, take the economic risk and provide a vital part of the work and supervision of the unit.

Magneson also emphasized that the importance of training young people about farm safety, noting that NFU has an active farm safety program and also partners with other organizations to educate youth on farm safety. He cited Farmers Union's participation in Progressive Farmer magazine's Farm Safety Program and Farm Safety 4 Just Kids as just two examples.

National Farmers Union is a general farm organization representing nearly 300,000 family farmers and ranchers nationwide. NFU serves its membership by assisting with education, by providing stimulus and know-how for farmer-owned cooperatives and by presenting the organization's policies to lawmakers at the local, state and national levels.

'Lacy' — New Milk, Protein Record Holder

BELOIT, Wis. — Rolling Meadows Dotson Lacy "V87-V86MS," a K Top Acres Dotson ET daughter, is the new Brown Swiss breed record holder for milk and protein with a record of 46,690M 5.0% 2,348F 3.7% 1,716P at 7-07 in 365 days.

"Lacy's" record-breaking production levels of milk and protein came as no surprise to Rolling Meadows Swiss of Columbiana, Ohio, since she is a maternal sister to Rolling Meadows Dots Lady "V88," the past milk and current fat record holder. This strong line of high producing animals doesn't stop there. "Lacy's" dam, Johann Lovely Lace ET "V88" has lifetime totals to 205,500M 8,760F 7,324P in 2,917 days and is a maternal sister to the number one protein bull on the INTERBULL proofs, Etazon Energy with +74P.

"Lacy's" daughters, Rolling Meadows Baerga Lin and Rolling Meadows Al Lacy, are also making names for themselves in the world of high producing Brown Swiss cows. Mark Witmer states, "We thought that Baerga was a perfect cross for Lacy, combining two great cow families of the breed, Priscilla and Sunny View Improved Lady. The result was Lin and in our opinion, she is a fantastic milk cow with a large frame, well-attached udder and a very good set of feet and legs." "Lin" was the number one cow on the February 1998 Supplemental Cow High Protein List (previously Supplemental CPI List), with +105P. She will also be the classleader for milk, fat and protein in the junior 2-year-old division, with a record of 32,806M 4.2% 1,377F 3.6% 1,180P at 2-01 in 288 days. "Lacy's" other daughter, "Al Lacy," has records to 24,570M 3.8% 935F 3.4% 840P at 2-03 in 365 days.

"Lacy," at 9 years old, is housed with the rest of the Rolling Meadows herd in a free stall environment, and is still going strong. "Lacy has a tremendous body with a good set of feet and legs, as well as a well-attached udder," comments Mark. Embryos and bulls will be available from "Lacy" and "Lin."

Mark states, "We have bred Brown Swiss cows here at Rolling Meadows for over 60 years and since we do not show, we breed for high production and functional type." The Witmers believe that the Brown Swiss breed has a tremendous production capability if more people would breed for it. Rolling Meadows Farm and Mark offer this advice to fellow Brown Swiss breeders, "As a breed, we have to stress more production and not concentrate exclusively on type."

This is the philosophy that Rolling Meadows has followed over the years and that they will continue to follow in the future. Congratulations to Rolling Meadows for breeding and developing such high producing Brown Swiss cows.

The Brown Swiss Cattle Breeders' Association, headquartered in Beloit, Wisconsin, was founded to serve as the national organization for the registration and promotion of Brown Swiss cattle.

Church & Dwight, Monsanto and H.J. Baker & Bros. Team Up To Sponsor Advanced Dairy Workshops

PRINCETON, N.J. — Church & Dwight Co., Inc., Monsanto Dairy Business and H.J. Baker & Bro., Inc., have teamed up to sponsor a series of Advanced Dairy Workshops held throughout North America between February and August 1998.

This joint venture features the dairy industry's leading researchers and nutritionists informing participants about the latest dairy research, technology and most importantly, sound business philosophy.

"We are very pleased to present this series of workshops for the dairy industry," says Bill Tom, MEGALAC® senior business manager for Church & Dwight. "It's an opportunity for dairy leaders to advance their skills, implement innovative concepts in their business, and continue their education."

The workshop discusses several important topics and features the industry's leading experts in their fields.

Dr. William Chalupa of the University of Pennsylvania presents details on advanced nutritional concepts including balancing rations for amino acids, starch, carbohydrates and maximizing ruminal microbial protein flow.

Dr. Tom Jenkins of Clemson University on Dr. Paul Chandler of Chandler and Associates, Dresden, Tenn., discusses energy utilization and interaction on reproduction and productions. They also cover fat digestibility and the specific role fat plays in maximizing reproduction.

Dr. William Sanchez, technical services manager for Church & Dwight, presents information on practical applications of cation-anion concepts for dairy cows. His presentation includes details on cation-anion balancing, buffering the rumen and transition ration nutrition.

Dr. Gerald Poppy, technical services specialist with Monsanto Dairy Business, or Mr. Gary Sipiorski, ag loan officer with Citizens State Bank, share "Tips for Economic Decision-Making on Dairies." This session includes sound dairy business management and philosophy along with vital advice to help producers make good business decisions.

"Too often we present new information and technology to dairy producers without giving them the tools to measure the economics involved," Poppy says. "It's imperative that we work together to utilize these tools and help with the economic decision-making process."

The workshop also devotes an entire segment to computer ration balancing using the updated 3.0 version of the Net Carbohydrate and Protein System Model (CPM). Attendees learn about the new CPM program and are trained on nutritional modeling. The session is moderated by Dr. Chalupa.

"We have combined resources to bring the latest dairy technology, research and trends to feed company representatives, nutritionists, veterinarians, and most importantly, dairy producers," explains Danny Wright, Pro-Lak product manager for H.J. Baker & Bro.

The goals of the workshops are to advance the economic viability of dairy producers, provide participants with the latest concepts in dairy nutrition and modeling, and offer a forum to leading dairy nutritionists.

"The workshop has been a real success," Wright says. "This workshop is different from any other because three leading companies are working together to bring new information to the dairy community. For us to be successful, we have to invest in the future of our industry. That means giving nutritionists the information they need to help their producers remain profitable for years to come."

Workshops are slated to be held in Syracuse, N.Y.; Atlanta, Ga.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Appleton, Wis.; Twin Falls, Idaho; Seattle, Wash.; Ontario, Canada; Fresno and Modesto, Calif.; and Torreon, Mexico.

Although attendance for the workshop is by invitation only, interested industry professionals can contact their local Monsanto Dairy Business, Church & Dwight or H.J. Baker & Bro. representative Bill Tom at (609) 279-7335 for more information.

YOU DON'T HAVE TIME FOR ANYTHING LESS THAN THE PERFORMANCE OF A TYE

PASTURE PLEASER

Tye's proven 4 step No Till Seeding System lets you move quickly through tough NoTill conditions, planting a full 5' or 7' in each pass. A big self-cleaning 2 bu. ft grain box feeds our exclusive internal flute seeders to assure gentle, accurate seed metering. And the HD coulters and Double Disc Row Units provide positive seed placement. Add these features to versatile options like legume, native grass, and fertilizer attachments, and you've got a quality performer in pastures, haylands and field crops.

Both Pasture Pleaser® and Autoreset Paratill® in stock now.

AN UNSTOPPABLE COMBINATION: PARATILL WITH AUTORESET

AUTORESET PARATILL®

Tye® Paratill's automatic hydraulic reset makes deep soil loosening smoother than ever.

There's no stopping as Paratill breaks up soil compaction and plow pans in a single pass without destroying residue. The patented 45° angled leg gently lifts the soil and allows it to fracture along its natural planes of weakness. This promotes deeper water infiltration and improved root growth for healthier, drought-resistant crops.

LUCK//NOW MIXER FEEDERS "P" SERIES

Since 1979 LUCK//NOW Mixer Feeders have been recognized as one of the most dependable and strongest built mixers in the field.

To enhance its existing line of Mixer Feeders, LUCK//NOW introduces the "P" Series of Mixer Feeders with six models ranging in size from the Model 300 with a mixing capacity of 310 cubic ft., to the Model 575 with a mixing capacity of 625 cubic ft.

The Large diameter augers in all the "P" Series Mixer feeders are capable of giving the mix required, from rations with well cured, long stemmed legume-type hay, to mixes with green grass, and mixes with silage and commodities. Better milk production, better weight gains and greatly improved animal health are just some of the results of a finely-tuned feed ration.

Reel Time Savings to Real Farmers

"We feed 100 milk cows and a total of 150 animals with four loads per day at three different locations. We save 1 1/2 - 2 hours of feeding time every day with our Knight Reel Auggie tow."

Russ and Kris Schroeder
Agriprize Holsteins - Horicon, Wisconsin

"We feed a total of 140 head with 52 milking. Before our Knight Reel Auggie, feeding a TMR took us 1 1/2 hours twice a day. Now each feeding takes approximately 1/2 hour."

John and Harry Nooyen
Brabantdale Farms - Narvan, Ontario, Canada

"We feed about 200 head per day with an average of 100 milking. We owned a 4-auger mixer before. Our Knight Reel Auggie has a shorter mixing time with a superior blended ration."

Wayne and Bradley Beidel
Beidel Brothers - Newbury, Pennsylvania

Livestock Evaluation Meetings Set

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Three separate evening programs will be held for livestock producers to develop their evaluation skills.

Below find the dates and activities for each meeting. All livestock producers are encouraged to attend.

• Session #1 - Basic Livestock Evaluation, April 21, 7:30 p.m. at the Berks County Agricultural Center. This program will develop your ability to evaluate a live animal and determine estimations of carcass traits. Traits such as rib/loin eye area, depth of fat over rib/loin, yield grades and quality grades will be the emphasis. This will be a classroom setting using slides and video.

• Session #2 - On-Foot Live Evaluation, April 28, 7:30 p.m. at the Leesport Farmer's Market. This program will have four steers, four market swine, and four market lambs be evaluated. Participants will place the animals like a typical judging contest. Each animal will also be evaluated for rib/loin eye area, depth of fat over rib/loin, yield grade, and quality grade.

• Session #3 - On-Rail Carcass Evaluation, April 30, 7:30 p.m. at Peter's Brothers Meats, Lenhartsville. Each class be judged on the rail and carcass measurements for the rib/loin eye area, depth of fat over rib/loin, yield grade, and quality grade will be showed and discussed. The live animal estimators and actual carcass measurements will be reviewed.

John Wysolmerski of DEKALB Genetics Corporation has successfully completed the requirements to be named a Certified Crop Adviser (CCA).

The CCA is a newly established, volunteer certification program which is being implemented for agribusiness personnel across the nation. Over 21,000 individuals have taken the exams which is one of the first steps in the certification process. There are approximately 10,100 professionals who have passed the exams and met the credential requirements to be CCA's in the United States.

The CCA program is designed to establish base standards of knowledge for individuals who advise growers on crop management and production inputs. The program's goal is to help farmers address environmental issues such as water quality, soil loss, and integrated pest management.

John Wysolmerski passed both a state and national exam and has completed the requirements to receive CCA certification which includes an advanced degree plus advising experience. Wysolmerski has also signed a Code of Ethics and will have to accumulate at least 20 hours of continuing education credits every year to keep his certification current.

"The vision of CCA is to have the certified crop adviser be universally recognized for their production expertise," said Gary Johnson, former chairman of the Illinois CCA State Board. "This program will help farmers implement practices which fulfill the need for profitable food production while protecting the environment and maintaining the public's trust in production agriculture. The CCA is similar to the bar exam for an attorney or meeting the requirements for a Certified Public Accountant (CPA)."

The CCA program evolved from a national group of agribusiness interests whose top priority was professionalism in agriculture. Initially, education and training were obvious parts of the formal proposal but a means of recognizing individuals skilled in crop advising was an equal part of the plan. Most important was to develop a program farmers could recognize as being meaningful.

The CCA program is coordinated by A Federation of Certifying Boards in Agriculture, Biology, Earth and Environmental Sciences formally known as the American Registry of Certified Professionals in Agronomy, Crops and Sciences (ARCPACS) - a membership service of the American Society of Agronomy. Certification of CCA credentials and development of CCA state exam questions are handled by a state board composed of representatives from agribusinesses, agricultural consulting, universities and government agencies.

Visit Impacts Federal Policies

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The 130 Farmers Union members participating in National Farmers Union's (NFU) legislative fly-in here, March 22-25, addressed environmental concerns, got an important commitment on measures to combat anticompetitive practices in the livestock processing sector, and were on hand for the announcement of the introduction of a bill to remove caps on commodity loan rates.

Vice President Al Gore addressed participants, commending NFU for helping bridge the agricultural-environmental gap. He said that it was essential for agriculture to be represented when environmental policies are made and implemented in order for regulators to "get it right."

morning that he and a half dozen other senators have agreed with U.S. Department of Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman to jointly pursue administrative and legislative action to improve the competitiveness of the livestock market. "We must end the secret deals in livestock sales right now," Daschle said.

The Farmers Union members also participated in a news conference where U.S. House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., introduced the Family Farm Safety Net Act of 1998. NFU has pushed for greater marketing flexibility for producers, calling the Gephardt legislation "a good first step."

In addition, Farmers Union grassroots lobbyists met with congressional offices and USDA officials on concerns with farm programs and their delivery.

Bunt Measure Extends Ag Loan Forgiveness

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Legislation introduced by Rep. Ray Bunt Jr. (R-147) to extend an Agriculture Loan Forgiveness Program for qualified applicants working on family farms or engaged in mixed practice veterinary medicine in Pennsylvania has passed the House of Representatives.

Bunt said the bill removes the July 1, 1998 sunset date of the program. It provides up to $2,000 per year, up to a maximum of $10,000 in loan forgiveness. The Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency (PHEAA) administers the program.

"This program provides college students working in family agriculture businesses, and people practicing veterinary medicine, a measure of financial relief for higher education expenses," said Bunt. "It is an important compoent of encouraging people to continue working in this vital industry, our state's largest."

Under the provisions of House Bill 9, by removing the expiration date for the program, the General Assembly continues to have the discretion to annually provide funding for the program. Qualified student applicants will continue to have the opportunity to apply for loan forgiveness to the extent that funds are made available by the General Assembly.

The original Agriculture Education Loan Forgiveness Act was adopted in 1992 and was amended in 1993 to continue it for five years. This year's expiration date would be lifted permanently through Bunt's legislation.

The bill passed the House on March 31 by a vote of 198-2 and has been sent to the Senate for consideration.

Dealership Earns Service Excellence Rating

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Messick Farms Equip Inc. has earned the New Holland Service Excellence rating for 1998.

According to Doug Breneman, service manager, this recognition is based on a thorough evaluation by New Holland service experts of the dealership's service operator.

"To get the Service Excellence rating we have to meet New Holland standards in areas such as service personnel training; shop facilities, tools and procedures; program administration; even bookkeeping. They look at everything," said Breneman.

Breneman said Messick's personnel work hard to qualify for the Service Excellence rating because it's the best way to insure first-class service for customers.

"We want our customers to be completely satisfied with the service they get from us. Meeting the Service Excellence standards helps us achieve our customer satisfaction goal," he said.

Auctioneers Celebrate National Auctioneers Month

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — Auctioneers throughout the United States and Canada will be calling attention to the advantages of the auction method of marketing during April in celebration of National Auctioneers Month, sponsored by nearly 6,000 members of the National Auctioneers Association (NAA).

Auctions of real and personal property have always been an influential part of marketing in the United States and throughout the world.

April offers auctioneers across the nation an opportunity to explain the many advantages of auctions, which are becoming increasingly recognized as an efficient method of turning valuable property into instant cash for the seller.

This is underscored by the sheer volume of the auction industry. A recent survey conducted by the Gallup Organization showed an astounding $161 billion in property was sold in one year.

Auctioneers are honored for their many noteworthy contributions they are making to our economy and society. With an auction, the auctioneer's focused marketing skills bring in a maximum number of qualified buyers which in return nets the seller the highest possible price for property in the least amount of time. The buyers get exactly what they want at auction, at a cost only one bid higher than what someone else is willing to pay, in turn determining the fair market value.

Phil, Frank and Mike Jacquier of Auctioneer Phil Jacque, Inc. in Southwick, Mass., who are active members of the NAA, join in the celebration to promote high standards of professionalism and excellent service to the public.

Dekalb Packaging Helps Prevent Planting Errors

DEKALB, Ill. — Long hours and a frantic pace at planting time set the stage for possible seed mix-ups. Many farmers would agree it's very easy to grab the wrong bag of seed when you're working against the clock.

The wrong herbicide sprayed on the wrong corn can destroy an entire field and cost farmers thousands of dollars in lost input costs and potential revenue.

In an effort to help minimize planting mistakes, Dekalb Genetics Corporation introduces a new, distinctive packaging system for its herbicide — and insect-resistant hybrids and varieties.

"In the past a farmer's main planting concern was grabbing the bag of seed with the right relative maturity," said Ken Rinkenberger, director of seed marketing for Dekalb. "Now, new seed technology has added a number of variables such as herbicide- and insect-resistant products that raise the stakes when seed mix-ups occur during the hectic spring planting season."

To help avoid potential prob-

In an effort to help minimize planting mistakes, Dekalb Genetics Corporation introduces a new, distinctive packaging system for its herbicide — and insect-resistant hybrids and varieties.

lems during critical spring planting, Dekalb has made several unique and distinctive changes to its packaging for the 1998 planting season.

"The new color and package design on our specific-trait products, including Roundup Ready® and Bt corn, should make them easy to distinguish from their conventional counterparts, even when bags are lying on pallets," noted Rinkenberger.

Changes include a switch to yellow-colored gussets on the sides of the herbicide-resistant bags vs. white gussets used on Dekalb's conventional seed bags. Bt corn hybrids will have a black gusset to set them apart. "In addition to the yellow and black gussets, the new bags feature a prominent stripe across the front that clearly labels the bags as either herbicide or insect resistant," said Rinkenberger.

Specific-trait products also have special name designations that clearly identify them as different from non-STP hybrids and varieties offered by Dekalb. For example, the Roundup Ready counterpart to DK 580 is labeled as DK 580RR. Another safeguard against mix-ups is a green tint that has been added to herbicide-resistant corn seed itself.

The bag tags also clearly state the herbicide- and insect-resistant designation and carry the specific-trait logo that applies to that particular seed product. The words "herbicide resistant" or "insect resistant" also appear in red on each bag's tear-open strip.

New Disc Mower-Conditioner From New Holland

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The New Holland HW340 self-propelled disc mower-conditioner combines famed Speedrower® windrower dependability with the high-speed cutting of New Holland Discbine® disc mower-conditioners to clear large acreage high-yield crops quickly, according to the company.

New Holland says the 15½-foot 12-disc modular cutterbar works fast even in difficult conditions. Discs slice through fire ant and gopher mounds and do not plug in thick, dense crops that stay wet and gummy in the stubble area.

A full-floating auger delivers thick crops to the chevron-design rubber conditioning rolls without plugging. The conditioner is easily removed for high-yield forage soybeans and other crops where it isn't needed. Independent disc module design provides each disc with sealed oil bath and simplified service.

The new Model HW340 is powered by a 166-HP Genesys™ engine for ample power in all crops. Flotation tires and heavy-duty rear axle spindles easily carry the unit in soft conditions and in rough fields. A 110-gallon fuel tank offers more than a full day of cutting between fuel stops.

The company noted that to maximize owner usage of the new mower-conditioner, the disc header can be removed and replaced with a New Holland 2300 Series sicklebar header in less than 30 minutes. Draper headers with up to 30-foot cutting width can also be adapted to the new "HW340."

The team penning demonstration was conducted by Ray, Linda, Teresa, and Belinda Geesaman. The Paso Finos were presented by Karen LeBlanc and Nikke Collins of Fifala Farm. A donation of $127 was collected for the local Therapeutic Riding Center. Volunteer Nina Hill thanked Sni-der's Elevator and their customers for previous donations. Anyone interested in volunteering or participating in this program for handicapped people can contact Snider's Elevator or the Franklin County Extension Office in Chambersburg.

CHESTER D. HUGHES Extension Livestock Agent Top Grading Farm Show Steers

If carcass data from steers exhibited by 4-H and FFA members at the 1998 Pennsylvania Farm Show is used as a barometer of current beef industry trends, then quality grade must be high on the scale of importance. Since 1988, when the collection of data from a significant number of Farm Show steers began, there has been a noticeable increase in the percentage of carcasses achieving the Choice quality grade. Of the 15 steers evaluated in the 1998 group, 80 percent graded in the Choice and Prime grades. Compare that to 10 years ago, when only 37 percent graded Choice, and 22 percent were below the Select grade.

As we entered the '90s, the shift was under way in the beef industry away from big frame cattle to more moderate frame scores. Packers discounted cattle with carcasses in excess of 900 pounds and ribeyes were getting too large for the average consumer.

In the last decade cattlemen have backed off in the quest for extreme frame size, extreme growth and apparently extreme leanness. Again, if you allow me to use the Farm Show data as an indicator, it is apparent that cattle, today, are more moderate in terms of leanness and muscle. The 1998 data reflect an average fat thickness of .47 inches, the highest it's been over the past 10 years. Average ribeye area this year was 12.6 square inches, the lowest in the last decade. The yield grade average peaked at 3.2 in 1998. Even though the percentage of cattle grading choice has fluctuated over the period of record, the average carcass achieving Choice is at about 60 percent. Over the last five years, the average settles at nearly 70 percent.

Do our Pennsylvania show steers align with the standards of our cattle industry? In our area of the country there is a demand for Choice quality cattle. Our cattle feeders like to send loads to the packer that are 80 percent Choice or better. For Farm Show steers, the decade average yield grade is 2.9, right smack in the middle of the commonly accepted YG 2-3 range (2.0-3.99). Ribeyes at 13.2 square inches and fat thickness at .41 inches are certainly industry and consumer acceptable. Show steers today are more moderate in frame, live weight and carcass weight. Averages for the 15 steers evaluated in 1998 indicate 1,249 pounds live weight and 794 pounds for carcass weight. This load of steers would certainly be acceptable in today's marketplace.

Electric Fence Tips

For effective animal control, wire spacing is more important than fence height. More animals go through and under fences than over them. Proper wire spacing makes your fences more effective.

Regardless of how many wires your fence has, always position one wire at the shoulder height of the animal to be controlled. This is the "nose wire" that your animals see and touch when they approach the fence. Other fence wires should be spaced according to the type of animal: 10 inches to 12 inches apart for cattle and horses, 6 inches to 8 inches apart for sheep and goats. The bottom wires should be closer together than the top wires.

Fences taller than 48 inches aren't really necessary. In many countries, livestock fences are seldom over 42 inches tall. Electric fences can be even lower — 36 inches for cattle and horses, 30 inches for sheep and goats. Shorter fences also allow closer wire spacing.

When utilizing electric fencing, you can't have too many ground rods. Sometimes one will work, but three is better. When an animal touches the fence, the electricity must travel through the animal into the soil; then through soil to a ground rod. The current then travels from the ground rod to the fence charger, where the circuit is completed. Only then does the animal feel the shock.

Therefore, the more ground rods, the more electricity gets back to the fence charger. That's why the best ground system consists of three galvanized ground rods, at least six feet deep, spaced 10 feet apart. For best results, install your ground rods where soil moisture is constant. Always use clamps to attach the ground wire to the ground rods. Remember, your electric fence is only as good as its ground system.

Controlling Footrot With Footvax

Over the past five years, a number of studies have been conducted evaluating the benefits of the Footvax vaccine for footrot control in sheep. Of the 20 known strains of the organism that cause footrot in sheep, Footvax has been shown to be active against at least 14. Most studies have shown that Footvax should not be used alone but in conjunction with hoof trimming and foot baths of up to an hour in a 10 percent zinc sulfate solution. When Footvax is used with hoof trimming and foot soaks, 95 to 100 percent of the footrot within a flock can be eliminated. To prepare a 10 percent zinc sulfate solution, mix eight pounds of zinc sulfate with 10 gallons of water. Zinc sulfate is easier to get into solution if it is dissolved in a five-gallon bucket of hot water first. Add one cup of liquid laundry detergent for each 20 gallons of water as a wetting agent.

Research conducted in Oregon showed that Footvax seemed to be more effective as a treatment rather than as a preventive. In other words, when given to ewes with footrot, Footvax was beneficial. However, when given to ewes that had never had footrot, it did not help in reducing the risk of infection. Because of the relatively high cost of the vaccine, you may want to consider only administering the vaccine to infected ewes rather than the whole flock.

Rodent Control In Swine Facilities

Rats and mice can be a major economic threat around swine facilities. They consume and contaminate feed and cause feed losses through the gnawing of holes in feed bags and wooden bins. They may also be responsible for maintaining or spreading swine diseases. House mice, Norway rats, and roof rats as a group are considered the most troublesome and economically important rodents in the United States. Norway rats will undermine building foundations and concrete slabs. Roof rats and house mice, in addition to Norway rats, are particularly destructive to building insulation. Most common types of insulation including rigid foam and fiberglass are susceptible to rodent damage. A rodent infestation can damage structures by thousands of dollars in a matter of months. Additionally, rodents may gnaw on electrical wiring causing equipment malfunction, power outages, and potentially dangerous short circuits.

Droppings, tracks, burrows, pathways, and fresh gnawings, including rodent-damaged feed sacks, indicate areas where rodents are active. Around swine facilities, insulated walls and ceilings are common nesting locations for rodents, especially mice.

Effective control involves (1) sanitation (2) rodent-proof construction, and (3) population reduction. Reduction techniques include trapping, poisoning, and fumigation.

New Extension Agent For Warren, Erie, Crawford Counties

YOUNGSVILLE (Warren Co.) - James Cowden, Warren County Cooperative Extension director, recently announced the assignment of a new extension agent to Warren.

Adam Downing started working in Warren County recently replacing Sanford "Sandy" Smith as the forestry/4-H extension agent.

According to Cowden, Downing will be working with forest landowners in Warren, Crawford, and Erie counties.

Downing grew up, coincidentally, in Warren, Ohio. He attended Purdue University in Indiana, earning a bachelor's degree in forestry. After he was graduated in 1993, Downing began his forestry career with the Indiana Department of Natural Resources as an assistant to the district forester.

Following his Indiana work, the Peace Corps accepted Downing as a forestry extension agent with an appointment to Africa. During his 18-month tenure in Kenya, he served a community by teaching farmers how to start and maintain a tree nursery for their own use. He then returned to the U.S. and began to pursue a more tailored education in forestry extension at Penn State. He is continuing to work on his graduate studies.

Cowden stated that Downing is looking forward to meeting members of the community and becoming involved with individuals and groups interested in forestry and natural resources. Contact him at the Warren County extension office, (814)563-9388.

HI-LIFT LEGS

The new advance design Volumaxx unloader gives you the best of both worlds your choice of distribution. New HI-LIFT legs let you raise the unloader an extra 15" into the silo roof, so you can use a conventional side distributor. Or, choose the Jamesway Powermaxx™ broad pan silage distributor. With proper distribution, you'll have better quality feed, and you'll increase your silo's capacity up to 35%. And we can prove it!

ROTO-MIX IV FEED MIXERS

With ROTO-MIX IV you reduce fines, minimize shrinkage, and eliminate dead spots. The gentle tumbling action mixes fragile flaked and high-moisture ingredients without grinding, resulting in a fluffier, more nutritional ration.

The ROTO-MIX end-to-end, side-to-side mixing system provides the most thorough TMR available, ensuring that your cattle will consume a balanced ration of nutrients in every pound of feed they eat.

Protect your valuable feeds from the elements... increase the efficiency of your feeds, your animals, and your labor.

Stop Destroying Your Paint

Notable Benefits

- 1 Glowry is goof-proof. It can be allowed to dry on a vehicle and cause no damage or streaking. It cannot harm your paint.
- 2 The film not only keeps soils and alkalis off the paint, but also protects the paint from the ultraviolet light that usually dulls the paint.
- 3 Glowry does not allow the buildup of any oxidized paint.
- 4 Polishing or waxing to maintain a "new vehicle" appearance is unnecessary.
- 5 Glowry releases oil and grease very quickly which aids post water treatment.
- 6 Glowry is safe and completely biodegradable.

SERVICES THAT'S MORE PROFITABLE

For Francis and Dan Mains, who farm 700 acres west of Carlisle, the bottom line is the gauge by which they judge their dairy farm operation. In partnership for 10 years, this father and son team work very well together.

"We market our crops through the cows," Dan said. "My dad and I work the field crops and hire people to manage and milk the herd. I don't consider myself a cow man. That's why the consulting service that comes with Purina's program is so important to us."

Today, 366 cows produce a rolling herd average of 24,513m and 64 cows milking more than 100 pounds and a daily herd average of 83.9 pounds. But it wasn't always this way. When the Mains switched to Purina nearly three years ago, the herd average was only 21,000m and was unsatisfactory. Now with Proteus balancing corn silage, western hay, cotton seed, high moisture corn, beans, and bean meal in a TMR mix, production has increased significantly. And the Mains believe that within the next five years they can increase production even more. They are working toward a goal equivalent to two million pounds of milk per person.

In addition to Proteus for the milking cows, they use Prepare 50 for the dry cows, Nurse Chow for the small calves, and Calf Startena for the larger calves.

While these dairymen believe Purina feeds are excellent, the extra services are of even greater importance to the total dairy operation. Their Purina representative acts a consultant for the herd. Blood, milk, or tissue testing is done by the veterinary laboratory at Purina's headquarters in St. Louis.

"Purina has a lot of services you can't get anywhere else," Dan said, "and it's these services that help make our farm more profitable. If our feed representative does not have the answer to a problem, he can get the answer very quickly."

Francis and Dan Mains operate their 700-acre, 366-cow commercial dairy herd from this picturesque setting west of Carlisle.

FORAGING AROUND

'Industry, Farmer, Scientist — Working Together Toward A Sounder Grassland Program'

Coordinator Speaks About Economics, Benefits Of Grazing

ANDY ANDREWS

Lancaster Farming Staff

FAYETTEVILLE (Franklin Co.)

— "A fellow staring out now would not have to invest in equipment and have large overhead to get in the dairy business," said Titus Martin, who switched to grazing about five years ago.

The Franklin County dairyman who helped found the Franklin County Grazers spoke about the advantages to a grazing system recently at his farm.

Martin, of Ti-Lin Holsteins, spoke at last month's Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference in Grantville about the economics of grazing. He pointed out the difficulties of getting started as a dairy producer the traditional way — the huge capital investment of land, machinery, and other costs — a lot of which can be curtailed through low-cost grazing.

(Look to an article on Jeff Wolfe, Hanover, on how somebody just entering dairying has adopted grazing in this issue of Foraging Around.)

Martin switched to grazing in 1993. One day, he simply got disgusted with the old headaches of equipment and maintenance costs and settled on grazing, which he claims is a "more relax-

PFGC Honors Producers, Educators At Conference

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Several award-winning forage and grazing supporters were honored for their work in promoting forages and grazing last month at the 1998 Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference here at the Holiday Inn.

The Outstanding Pasture Producer Award was presented to Jimmy Garner, Montrose, Susquehanna County.

Garner has been intensively grazing his 70 dairy cows on 35 acres for nearly seven years. He has been actively involved in the Chesapeake Bay Program and the use of grazing to meet the program goals.

"This accomplishment speaks for itself in highlighting Jimmy's grazing management skills," noted Dr. Marvin Hall, extension forage specialist, Penn State. "Mr. Garner is always willing

During the Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference in Grantville, as I sat and listened to Mr. Lewis Sapp, who spoke of fencing and in particular on energizers, I thought about how I would share some of his key points with you. So here is a brief summation of what he shared with us.

His first point was that you need to think about the two reasons you are fencing, which are for control or for profit. Control means to keep animals in or out of an area, to separate classes or types of animals, to fence out sensitive areas, or to improve pastures. The issue of for profit involves getting more forage production from a piece of land, thereby producing more milk, meat, or animal product per acre.

ed, less stressful way of doing the job," he said. There is less stress on the cows. There is also less stress on the farmer.

For farmers just starting out in dairying, grazing, which avoids the "big money" investment in equipment, could be the way to go, Martin learned. Other reasons were overall cow health improvement, the increasing costs of equipment and maintenance, and "my own personal stress load," Martin said.

The Titus and Linda Martin family operate a 123-acre dairy farm that consists of 60 acres of pasture, 30 acres of alfalfa, and 33 acres of corn. Their grade Holstein herd is comprised of 65 cows, 60 bred heifers, 23 open heifers, and 10 calves. On DHIA, their herd average is 18,000 pounds of milk at 3.6 percent fat and 3.2 percent protein.

Before 1993, Martin used a standard corn and alfalfa cropping pattern with three acres of dirt exercise lots. In 1993, that all changed — he began grazing bred heifers and dry cows on winter rye in the spring and alfalfa-grass in the summer. He started to graze the cows in September on brassicas and small grains.

In 1993, Martin learned about improved forage mixtures on grazing at a meeting in Lancaster, from the editor and founder of Stockman Grass Farmer, Alan Nations. In April the next year, Martin no-tilled a mixture of oats, perennial ryegrass, orchardgrass, and clover into 32 acres of stubble strips.

In May he installed a two-strand, high-tensile fence around the newly seeded pastures and old alfalfa-orchardgrass fields totalling 53 acres. He used polywire to subdivide the 53 acres into one-acre paddocks. Martin also installed 16-foot lanes using single-strand, high-tensile fence to access the paddocks.

Additional high-tensile fence was installed in 1995.

Materials used to set up the grazing work included 24,000 feet of high-tensile fence, 38,600 feet of polywire, 85 slinky gates, two different types of fence chargers, 8,000 feet of three-quarter inch 100 psi black plastic water line, another 1,700 feet of 1½-inch 100 psi black plastic water line, 700

6-foot, 4-inch treated fence posts in line, 20 8-foot, 6-inch treated fence posts on the corners, and 700 metal/fiberglass/plastic step-in posts.

Martin noted the cost for the temporary fencing was about $2,500. Cost for permanent fencing material was approximately $9,000.

Watering system cost was about $2,000. Cost for lane improvements from 1993-1997 was about $7,000.

In 1996, the 63 acres of cropland was divided into 30 acres of alfalfa and 33 acres of sorghum-sudangrass. But the wet year resulted in very poor quality feed, which required more grain and protein supplements for the herd. In the fall of 1996, all sorghum-sudangrass fields were seeded to rye for spring grazing.

Bred heifers and dry cows followed the cows in the grazing rotation and pasture took care of all nutritional needs April through mid-November. Martin noted that free-choice minerals were available at all times.

In 1997, what Martin refers to as the year of the "dust bowl," dry conditions proved a challenge. He used rye grain for grazing in April, then to the orchardgrass/clover/ryegrass mixture for May through July, then in August switched the grazing to sorghum-sudangrass and alfalfa. In September, the cows moved to the orchardgrass and rye/clover combination.

In April, the ryegrass was tested for feed value and turned up 22 percent crude protein. Acid detergent fiber (ADF) was 20 percent.

Even during the hot, dry, droughty August, the sorghum-sudangrass tested 24 percent crude protein and ADF was 37 percent.

When cost comparisons come into play are in grasses. The pastures are very high quality, requiring less feed. Cows on pasture are much cleaner, resulting in time saving during milking as well as a lower somatic cell count.

Before grazing, the hoof trimmer was on the farm about three times each year. The hoof trimmer has not been on the farm since grazing was started.

Other savings are in electric (approximately $200 per month in the summer), labor, and equipment repairs.

Martin now sells more cows for dairy purposes than before he started grazing because of improved cow

Grazing Strengths Extend To Hanover Dairyman

HANOVER (York Co.) — To Jeff Wolfe, grazing proved the least expensive way to get started, he noted.

"Grazing didn't have the high capital costs normally with a start-up," he said.

Wolfe, who is leasing the farm from Thomas Murren in Hanover, has been a member of the Franklin County Grazers since 1994.

The farm is comprised of 90 acres with 64 cows, Wolfe noted.

Martin has hosted several field days on his farm through the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA). The farm was host to a field day in 1994 and another in 1995.

In the winter of 1993-1994, Philip Wagner, Franklin County extension agent, encouraged and aided Martin

The farm is completely fenced in. The pastures consist of ryegrass, orchardgrass, fescue, and chicory. Other stands established include alfalfa/matua and some bromegrass.

In all, there are 16 paddocks ranging in size from 2 1/2 to about 9 acres.

When not grazing, the animals are fed free-choice dried hay. They're also fed a mix of half corn and oats with a 14 percent protein. The experience is proving profitable to Wolfe, who plans to increase the herd size someday to 90 cows.

and a core group of other graziers from the dairy discussion group that focuses on intensive rotational grazing. Martin serves as a founding member and coordinator of the Franklin County Grazers, formed in March 1994 and numbering about 40 producers. The producers meet about two times a month in the summer and once a month in the winter to discuss the challenges of grazing.

The informal group of Graziers includes producers from Adams, Perry, Cumberland, and Franklin counties. The producers' herd sizes range from more than 300 cows to about 50 cows.

The group has no officers, bylaws, or directors. They meet for pasture walks during spring through fall and meet at the extension office in Chambersburg during the winter. The support group "provides somebody to talk with, to discuss what works and what doesn't work," said Martin.

"The group has learned to build trust and be honest with one another," he noted.

Martin looks at the success of his grazing program. The bottom line: based on a survey of 2,500 farms conducted through the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau in 1996, Martin compares figures of net income per hundredweight (CWT) of milk. The top 10 percent of the producers in the state generate a net income per CWT of $1.08. Martin's is

New Penn State Extension Research Study Set To Record Pasture Growth Rates

EVERETT NEWSWANGER

Managing Editor

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A Penn State extension program is in place to do a research study on Pennsylvania pasture growth related to rotational grazing. Coordinated by Craig Williams, Tioga County extension agent, the research data will be collected in Tioga, Columbia, Somerset, Bradford/Susquehanna, Dauphin, Lancaster, and Berks counties. The county agents involved in the northeast region are Williams, Dave Hartman, and Mark Madden. In the Southeast region, Glenn Shirk with Jeff Stoltzfus and Jerry Martin, Mena Hautau, and Clyde Myers. The west region, Bob Brown.

Each county has a farm with five paddocks. Using a special electronic gage imported from New Zealand that translates growth into dry matter, the paddocks on all test farms across the state will be measured every week and these measurements will be e-mailed to Williams. The compiled results, both averages for the state and individual counties, will be published on a regular basis in a special column in Lancaster Farming.

Paddocks will be of mixed grasses of typical Pennsylvania pasture. The growth rates will be the start of a Pennsylvania data base and base line of how fast pasture grows in the state.

"This research takes us one level higher than the inches-in-inches-out method of the past," Williams said. "Basing the pasture growth on dry matter intake will help in planning the rotations and insure the cows have enough to eat according to their needs. This method will also help determine how many more or less acres of pasture are needed to provide adequate feed for the cows in both spring growth and summer drought."

The research will also help grazers to be more precise in when the take the cows off the paddock to allow for renewed growth. The management key to rotational grazing lies in making the right moves into and out of pastures to insure adequate feed nutrients while allowing adequate plant growth potential for later grazing periods.

The graph that accompanies this article shows the Pennsylvania average growth per day and dry matter in pounds as recorded in the 1997 growing season. The bottom graph shows the number of paddocks that were in the average—the number of paddocks that had an increase in growth for that week and were not grazed or clipped.

In future columns, both the new equipment and the farms where the test plots are located will be profiled.

$1.38. Net income per cow is $206 for the top 10 percent. Martin's net income per cow is $213. Production on top 10 percent was 19,000 pounds while Martin produced 15,300 pounds per cow.

But in Martin's case, the cows in the small paddocks are enjoyable to watch as they eat the grass like lawnmowers, he noted. The grasses are harvested by cows rather than equipment, which cost money and time to operate.

Forage Seeder Calibration Saves Money

DR. MARVIN H. HALL
Extension Forage Specialist
Penn State

Farmers who grow corn or soybeans generally know and have checked at what seeding rate they are planting. However, when asked about the rate at which they seed alfalfa, they may be a little less certain. In fact, many of those that think they know their alfalfa seeding rate may be off by several pounds.

In a recent study, large differences were found between seeding rates of different varieties of alfalfa when seeded through the same seeder. Coated seed flowed easier than uncoated seed, which resulted in higher seeding rates than was expected (considering the reduction in seed numbers per pound because of the increased seed size associated with seed coating). With uncoated seed, the seeding rates ranged from 14 to 21 pounds per acre without changing the settings on the seeder. While this range in seeding rates does surround the normally recommended alfalfa seeding rate (15-18 pounds per acre), the variation can be very expensive. If a farmer thought he was seeding 15 but he was actually seeding 20 pounds per acre, the additional cost per acre for seed would be substantial.

The difference between variety seeding rate was attributed to small differences in seed size and shape. It is a general rule-of-thumb that a pound of alfalfa contains 220,000 seeds, but the recent study showed a range from 196,000 to 224,000 seeds per pound. In addition, some seeds were slightly rounder and flowed through the metering device faster than other varieties. Recommended alfalfa seeding rates will normally result in 75 to 90 seeds per square foot. However, the range in seeding rates that was observed resulted in ranges from 70 to 105 seeds per square foot.

Unfortunately, varieties showed no consistent trends in variation. Therefore, seeder calibration is an important consideration when alfalfa varieties are changed. This can be done rapidly by driving the seeder over a tarp spread on the ground and counting the seeds that are dropped in a couple square foot areas on the tarp. Seeders which drop between 75 and 90 uncoated seeds per square foot are planting at recommended rates. Seeds should also be calibrated annually before starting to seed, since slightly worn seed metering devices on the seeder can cause large changes in alfalfa seeding rate.

and ready to share his grazing experiences and knowledge with others."

Gamer has hosted numerous field days and tours at his farm. These have included visiting farmers from as close as his neighbors to as far away as Russia.

Dick Kauffman, Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, a co-sponsor of the event, presented the award to Gamer.

The Conservation Award recipient is Louis A. Kopczyk, Clymer, manager of the Indiana County Conservation District.

Kopczyk has been active in providing opportunities for the residents of Indiana County to learn about uses of forages and grazing management.

"Louis tries to emphasize the role forages can play in proper conservation practices," said Marvin Hall, Penn State extension forage specialist.

"Although Louis discusses grazing management with many landowners on a one-to-one basis, these educational opportunities are provided primarily by organizing and conducting field days and pasture management meetings on farms around the county."

Hall noted, "His involvement of many diverse groups and organizations into these on-farm meetings stimulates understanding and better cooperation."

Kopczyk also obtained a grant and produced a fact sheet on various methods of supplying water to grazing livestock. This publication, noted Hall, has been "extremely well received by farmers in both Pennsylvania and Maryland."

Dick Kauffman, PFGC, presented the award to Kopczyk.

The PFGC Special Award was presented to James Hostetter, McVeytown, Mifflin County.

Hostetter, a dairy farmer, "has always emphasized the importance of quality forages to his dairy operation," Hall indicated.

"For many years, Jim has been a strong supporter of the PFGC and its programs," Hall noted.

PFGC Honors Producers

Hostetter served on the board of directors and as president of the PFGC. He has continued his interest and support of the PFGC since completing his term on the board in 1990.

The Special Award is the highest recognition given by PFGC. It is presented to an individual or company that has made a major contribution directly to the PFGC as well as an "outstanding contribution to Pennsylvania's forage and livestock industry and/or conservation farming," Hall indicated. The recipient's contribution may have been in production agriculture, industry, research, extension, teaching, or other public service.

The award was presented by Dr. John E. Baylor, retired forage specialist, Penn State.

This year's Extension Award recipient is Paul Craig, Dauphin County extension agent.

Craig has been active "in meeting the information and educational needs of producers in Dauphin County as well as the southeast region of Pennsylvania," noted Hall.

Craig has organized and taught at several forage-pasture related schools in the region, including as a major organizer and facilitator of the Pennsylvania grazing conferences.

"Without the help of Paul Craig, the grazing conferences would not be the educational force they have become," said Hall.

"He has always been an advocate of multiplying his educational efforts through the involvement of others who work with producers."

Along with classroom and conference-type educational activities, Craig has also conducted on-farm demonstrations and field days.

Noted Hall, "Paul Craig exemplifies the best an extension agent has to offer."

the flexibility (it is flexibility that we should build into our systems) to control his livestock under any and all situations. Control comes from the safe shock that the power fence gives to the livestock and provides a memorable experience that they do not want to repeat very quickly!

Sapp spoke about the power of the energizer, which he said is "the heart" of the system, and compared it to a tractor. He said that voltage of a charger compares to RPMs of the tractor engine and they are capable of putting out the same RPM numbers. However, the real power of the tractor is measured by the horsepower output and the energizer's power is measured in joules.

Joules is a measure of the power shock of the energizer. With adequate joules the fence system does not need physical strength, because animals will not challenge it if they have that memory of the shocking power. A fencing system must be adequately designed and constructed but the strength comes with the energizer.

Sapp spoke about the carrying capacity (voltage) of the fencing system, and he equated it to the carrying capacity of a watering system. He made this analogy: small pump and small pipes in a large system mean little if any water, and the same is true of the fencing system. Large pump and small pipes mean the same, large pump and large pipes in a large system mean plenty of water, and the same holds true for the fencing system. If you use a larger wire diameter (12.5 gauge) and multiple wires for a perimeter fence, it will provide you with adequate electrical charging capacity in your fencing system.

Aluminum wire has a much lower resistance and is much more conductive of current than is steel wire. The energizer should be located as close to the center of the system as possible to allow for a better distribution of current in the system, and with properly located cutoffs, gives you a lot of flexibility.

Sapp discussed in detail the grounding system of the charger. Without a grounding system, the pulse would not complete the circuit and would be completely ineffective, this is also true for a poor grounding system. The system works when livestock touch the wire and the current flows through their body and out their hooves into the ground and completes the circuit through the earth to the grounding system of the charger. He stressed that the most effective systems have the wires positioned so that the livestock are shocked in the face.

He recommended that a minimum of three galvanized steel ground rods be installed six feet in the ground and be spaced 10 feet apart. The system needs to be tested for resistance with an ohmmeter or a digital voltmeter to see if more ground rods are necessary. A procedure to conduct this testing is provided with most energizers; however, if you need a copy of this procedure, I have it and will make it available to you.

The other point he stressed was that adequate protection from lightning be provided because the grounding system of your energizer will generally be better than that which is provided by the primary or secondary service on your electric supply system. He provided some practical ideas on this subject and stated that some commercial products only provide coverage for one hit and then must be replaced. He offered ideas that provide permanent protection and these can be made by you or purchased, as new products are available. I can give you some information on this subject if you need it.

His presentation offered many practical solutions and advice on the design and installation of an energized fencing system. If you have specific questions or need some advice on fencing or energizers, give me a call at my new phone number (717)237-2221. Until next time, happy grazing!

FULL TIME™ FORAGE

AFFORD
ANOTHER YEAR?

All corn silage is not created equal according to Ron, Donna, Mark and Ronnie Hough. Until 4 years ago, Valleys End Farm, Rebersburg planted Ciba-Geigy corn hybrids. At that time Dave Martin, Young's Nutritional Consultant entered the picture. At first they were skeptical about his insistence about the importance of NDF digestibility and its relationship to dry matter intake. No questions anymore.

Thanks to feeding high-quality corn silage hybrids like 6511FQ and 7301FQ, their cows are making 102 lbs of milk and 246 days in milk, with a DHIA tank test butterfat of 3.8. Their 57.35 forage to 42.65 grain ration below is giving them income over feed costs of $10.07.

The Houghs value cow comfort in their tie stall barn and are an excellent management team on their dairy farm. But without a doubt, Forage Quality Hybrids from Cargill Hybrid Seeds have made their income over feed costs escalate. So how do you improve on 102 lbs of milk at $10.07 income over feed costs? They are planting 20 units of FULLTIME™ Forage this spring. Can milk production and income over feed costs get any better? ABSOLUTELY!

GENETIC WONDERS THAT WORK WARREN THOMPSON National Forage Specialist ABI Alfalfa and DR. HARLAN WHITE Extension Agriculturist Forages Vai Tech (Retired)

Farmers are constantly looking for a less-expensive, easier, more-reliable way to establish alfalfa. With the release of successful grazing tolerant varieties (Alfagraz, AmeriGraze 401 +Z, AmeriGraze 701, and AmeriGraze 702) more farmers are adding alfalfa to improve their pastures.

Establishing a strong stand can be challenging, especially in pastures that are steep and subject to erosion and moisture stress. Conventional tillage in these conditions is a serious threat to soil conservation and stand establishment. Enter no-till alfalfa. Procedures developed through research and refined through large-scale farmer adoption have made no-till seeding practical and widely adopted in many areas of the United States.

Two key components helping no-till alfalfa succeed – herbicides and drills – also have improved. The use of short-duration, low-residual herbicides (Gramoxone and Roundup) and the development of improved no-till seeding drills have made no-till practical and an easier system of seeding.

Advantages of no-till over conventional seedings:

- More soil saved (less erosion)
- Lower costs
- Less time involved in seedbed preparation and seeding
- Less labor
- More soil moisture saved
- More timely seeding.

Success standards for profitable no-till alfalfa:

- Plan ahead – select your field at least one year before seeding.

- Seed on well-drained soil.
- Seed in spring after winter soil-frost melt, or in late summer (fall) at least six weeks prior to historic first-frost date.

• Test soil to determine lime and fertilizer needs and recommendations. Needed lime should be applied one year before seeding. Best soil pH range is 6.4 to 6.7. Nitrogen should NOT be used in no-till.

• Control plan competition before and after seeding.

• Seed 15 to 20 pounds per acre at 1/4- to 1/2-inch depth on most soils. (Can seed at 3/4-inch depth on sandy soils.)

• Scout often and control insects. Seedling vigor:

Alfalfa, once established, is a tough, very persistent legume. But young alfalfa seedlings can be very vulnerable. Competition with grass, broadleaf and grassy weeds, and resident legumes may cause many new seedlings to be crowded or smothered during early establishment. Control of existing plants prior to seeding is a must. Short-residual herbicides, such as Roundup and Gramoxone, offer very effective broad-spectrum weed control to keep weeds from competing prior to and during stand establishment.

Where no-till works best:

- In perennial cool-season grass sod
- Following row crops
- Never into an old, thinning alfalfa stand.

Techniques for seeding no-till alfalfa in perennial cool-season grass sods/spring seeding:

1. Reduce the competition from existing plants with appropriate herbicides. Decide prior to seeding whether to eliminate the sod completely or maintain a portion to grow along with the alfalfa and modify herbicide application accordingly. Since errors in seed placement are a primary cause of alfalfa stand failure, use only no-till drills designed for seeding into sod. Regular grain drills cannot be depended upon to establish an optimum stand because they lack the engineering to get the seed through the residue and into the soil at the proper depth.

2. To eliminate as much of the sod as possible (if desired), mow or graze in early autumn and apply 1 quart of Gramoxone or 1 to 2 quarts of Roundup per acre. In early spring, a follow-up application of 1 pint Gramoxone may be used to achieve total control. No-till seed alfalfa in early spring (NOTE: When using Gramoxone, always include the recommended rate of surfactant for better control.)

3. To maintain a portion of the sod, graze or mow closely in early autumn and apply 1 quart of Gramoxone or 1 to 2 quarts of Roundup per acre. A follow-up spring application of 1 pint of Gramoxone is necessary only if winter annual weeds are a threat.

4. In areas where perennial broadleaf weeds such as dock, horse nettle, thistles or other persistent weeds are present, apply, 2,4-D and/or Banvel® at locally recommended rates and dates.

Late summer seeding (a new technique).

Graze or mow existing cover by late spring. Apply 1 quart of Gramoxone or 2 quarts of Roundup per acre. No-till seed 20 to 25 pounds per acre of foxtail (German) millet per acre. Harvest the mill for hay or silage in 7 to 8 weeks (at early head stage). If weeds or other plants survive the spring herbicide and summer smother crop, apply 1 pint of Gramoxone per acre for fall cleanup. Seed alfalfa no-till at 15 to 20 pounds of seed per acre at least 6 weeks ahead of historic freeze date.

Following row crops:

1. Following corn (harvested as grain or silage), seed a small grain for winter cover. If triazine herbicides (atrazine/simazine) are used in row crop production, their residual effects can injure legumes planted the following spring, so stick with labeled recommendations for best results. The following spring, apply 1 to 2 pints of Gramoxone in 20+ gallons of water per acre on the small grain when 4 to 6 inches tall. No-till drill 15 to 20 pounds alfalfa immediately. Should small regrowth occur (5 to 6 inches), mow just above the alfalfa or graze to help prevent smothering.

2. Alfalfa also may be seeded without tillage into standing small grain (8 to 10 inches) and wheat cut in the dough stage help reduce regrowth potential.

3. When small grain silage is made before the boot stage, wait 5 to 10 days for regrowth and apply 1 pint of Gramoxone in 20 gallons of water per acre, prior to seeding no-till alfalfa.

4. When the small grain is harvested as grain, fall seeding of alfalfa is best. Just before seeding, at least six weeks before historic freeze date, apply 1 to 2 pints of Gramoxone per acre to control weeds when soil moisture conditions are favorable. Volunteer small grain should be mowed or controlled with Poast after seeding – if it reaches 5 to 7 inches in height and threatens to smother the alfalfa seedlings.

No-till seeding is cost-effective:

Despite additional herbicide costs, no-till seeding of alfalfa is comparable in cost to conventional seeding when managed properly, according to many years of university research. The added benefits of no-till – reduced trips across the field, less machinery wear and tear, reduced seedbed preparation and seeding time and labor, reduced soil erosion, increased soil moisture – offset increased expenses in chemicals.

No-till alfalfa works!

Obviously, successful no-till seeding of alfalfa requires attention to detail and proper management to obtain a good stand.

National Forage Specialist

The use of alfalfa as a grazing crop is spreading across the USA in the humid regions particularly in the Midwest, Northeast, and much of the transition areas. The introduction and expanded use of true grazing tolerant varieties and continued needs to reduce production costs to increase net returns from dairy and beef cattle are the driving forces for moving in this direction. For now many leading farmers are using this alfalfa and finding not only a good yield but one with above expected persistence; a legume that is adapted to well drained soils which can be elevated to high pH rapidly at minimum costs. A legume that will survive under punishing treatment yet produce more abundantly and survive with better stand uniformity and less weed intrusion when grazed rotationally than any other legume grown in America.

The range of advantages to using alfalfa include: 1. Feed quality; there is no better legume. 2. Reliability + summer drought tolerance is unexcelled. 3. Annual and lifetime yield; alfalfa tops all legumes. 4. Versatility for use as grazings as well as for hay or silage. 5. Machinery and labor costs are greatly reduced. 6. Profit margins are increased as production costs decline. 7. Weather related harvest risks are reduced/eliminated. 8. Except for establishment, fertilizer and lime costs are great reduced.

Successful alfalfa grazing starts with a good stand. Start by adding lime to raise the pH to 6.5 or higher and fertilize according to current soil test recommendations. Seed at 15 pounds per acre or higher during the recommended time of year. Spring is the seeding season of choice in this area.

Most farmers who graze prefer to grow grass with their alfalfa to help manage bloat and prevent serious soil profile damage under exceptionally wet conditions. Grass can be weeded with the alfalfa or delayed for a year or two, and overdrilled in the existing stand of alfalfa. Autumn is the best time for overdrilling. The system of choice and most successful is 4-6 pounds of orchardgrass seeded through a no-till drill.

Rotational grazing is more productive and easier to manage than conventional continuous grazing. With the development of cheaper and more mobile electric fencing and watering systems, moving cattle is easy and less time consuming than inexperienced producers would expect. Especially is this found to be true once the animals have learned the routine and their rewards of more abundant high quality grazing once they are moved. Animals grazing on fresh vegetative forage eat more and convert a greater proportion to meat and milk. Another great advantage to rotational grazing; manure changes from a problem to a real asset. For when animals are grouped, manure is more uniformly distributed thus reducing the amount of topdress commercial fertilizers needed.

Managing a field for grazing in the establishment year can be quite successful with good planning. We recommend that the first crop be harvested as hay rather than grazed. This allows the immature plants (including crowns and roots) to grow and the newly prepared seedbeds to "settle."

When possible, stagger the hay harvest at 3 to 6 day intervals. Mowing a portion of a field (25-40 percent) at a time will help establish a sequence for subdividing for the remainder of the grazing season. Rotation grazing can begin in 20 to 25 days following hay harvest depending on growth and weather/soil conditions. For spring seedings, many farmers will get two grazings, others just one the first year. Remove the animals about five weeks or more ahead of first historic freeze date to allow time for food reserve restoration. The after-frost harvest on new alfalfa should be avoided unless there is a dire need for more forage. But even then, at least 4 to 6 inches of stubble should remain for winter protection.

Grazing established alfalfa can be simplified with a well designed program. One of the best systems that we have seen all across the USA is to turn the herd into the entire field early and when the alfalfa is 6 to 8 inches tall. As forage production exceeds animal needs, reduce the paddock size and back fence to prevent continued animal entrance in the areas already grazed. Continue to reduce the paddocks size until the animals graze regular patterns. When pasture production exceeds the grazing needs and before the crop gets well into maturity, remove this excess as hay or silage to keep the grazing sequence running smoothly and the vegetation at its highest possible quality. How often should cattle be moved? Farmers who move their animals each day report more meat and milk per acre than those who move the cattle once a week. And those who rotate on a weekly basis report a better response than those who move once a month. In every case, better yields and profits come from rotation grazing than with continuous grazing.

What about continuously grazing alfalfa? As farmers know, close continuous grazing is hard on any forage, grass and legumes alike. In fact, when any forage is sandpaper-grazed continuously, yields and stands both suffer. Unless the variety/species is well adapted, stands can be lost or severely reduced allowing native plants to invade. Intruders such as crabgrass, quackgrass, and many broadleaf weeds for example, can suppress or even eliminate desirable species.

With the advent of true grazing tolerant alfalfa varieties, (the first of which was Alfagraze), these problems are greatly reduced and stands do persist better than with conventional hay type varieties. Research by Dr. Carl Hoveland of the University of Georgia showed that when pasturing grazing tolerant alfalfa continuously through the summer months, native grasses did intrude; (for him, the grass was bermudagrass). While the grazing-tolerant alfalfa did survive and bounce back, he found, such management reduced yields and allowed unwanted weed invasion. He further found that by increasing fertility levels with phosphate and potash and allowing sufficient recovery time to form a generous canopy, this alfalfa again became the predominant species. Conventional hay types did not recover nearly as well. He also observed that when continuous grazing is practiced, 7 to 8 inches of growth should be maintained during the grazing season.

What about bloat? This is a question that is often asked by those who are anxious to try alfalfa as a grazing crop for the first time. Is alfalfa a potential culprit? Yes it is and so are many other legumes, especially white clovers (including ladina types). Farmers have found ways to manage to keep the potential problems in check. Here are some of the best prevention methods:

- Pre-fill hungry (emaciated) animals with dry hay and/or bulk feed.

- Put animals onto alfalfa pastures for short periods initially. The time interval on the pasture can be increased day to day as they adjust to the forage.

- Always keep dry hay available during grazing.

- Watch and be prepared to move animals on cool-wet days.

- Lush forage greatly increases consumption thus increases bloat potential.

- Grow alfalfa with compatible/adapted grasses. Orchardgrass seems best for this area.

- Feed bloat inhibitors. Poloxolene used according to recommendations prior to and during grazing reduces bloat.

Summary

Growing alfalfa specifically for grazing is fairly new. For years, farmers have grazed remnant alfalfa fields just before termination (a year or so before moving back to crop rotation) and under drought stricken conditions when yields did not justify haying costs. Some have even grazed hay-type alfalfa fields following the same guidelines as for hay and silage with mixed, usually disappointing stand persistent results. The advent of grazing tolerant varieties has vitalized interest in growing this crop for grazing. Why and who are these folks?

- Dairymen who want to cut milk production costs are using it more each year.

- Beef stocker operators who want quality feed and higher summer gains find they can produce over 2 pounds of day gain compared to about 1 pound from grass and 1.5-1.8 from grass and clovers. With other legumes, persistence and yield are problems.

- Beef cow-calf producers who want better conception rates, higher calf weaning weights and better carrying capacity with summer production reliability are at last realizing these benefits.

- Sheep producers who want a reliable source of high quality forage for finishing lambs have at last found an answer.

- This legume, when grown in pastures, increases meat and milk production.

Since so many leading farmers have moved to grazing, we expect to see a decided growth in the acreage of alfalfa for grazing. There is no reason to think otherwise. Farming has continuous need for more efficiency and net income and grazing alfalfa is a surefire way to accomplish that from farming. The seed to plant this program is already available and will get better through the years. New genetic breakthroughs are in the works, some available even now. Don't be at all surprised to see the highest yielding varieties in official trials, called multipurpose varieties, that are more persistent, and suitable for both grazing and mechanical harvest as hay and silage.

Seeding Alfalfa No-Till

Farmers are constantly looking for a less-expensive, easier, more reliable way to establish alfalfa. With the release of successful grazing tolerant alfalfa, more farmers are adding alfalfa to their pastures and looking for ways to do this with minimum costs and less chance of water erosion damage. No-till does not mean no-nothing. It simply means as was stated in the original Pasture Renovation Program outlined and defined by the American Society of Agronomy as "The improvement of a pasture by partial destruction of the sod, plus liming, fertilizing, and seeding as may be required to establish or re-establish desirable forage plants without an intervening crop." from the mid 1950s until the present, the keys to successful pasture improvement through minimum or no-till are the same. The only change is substituting chemicals for mechanical tillage and the development and distribution of no-till drills that properly place seed in the soil for best emergence and survival.

Three years ago, Dr. Harlan White, emeritus professor and former forage specialist at VPPI (Virginia) an I decided it was time we put together a no-till publication on seeding alfalfa no-till for distribution throughout America.

With our experience developing the process and putting it into massive use on farms in Virginia and Kentucky, we doubted that anyone could challenge our findings, writings, ad reports. So we wrote it and ABI Alfalfa published and distributed it. The title is "No-Till Alfalfa: Seeding For Success."

Seeding alfalfa no-till pastures on your farm:

Establishing a strong stand can be challenging especially in pastures that are steep and subject to erosion and moisture stress. Conventional tillage in these conditions is a serious threat to soil conservation and stand establishment. Procedures developed through research and refined through large-scale farmer adoption have made no-till seeding practical and widely adopted in many areas of the United States.

Two key components helping no-till alfalfa succeed (as we have already pointed out) are herbicides and drills. The use of short-duration herbicides (Gramoxone and Roundup) and development of improved no-till seeding drills have made this both practical and an easier system of seeding.

Advantages of no-till over conventional seeding include:

- More soil saved (less erosion)
- Lower costs
- Less time involved in seedbed preparation and seeding
- Less labor

- More soil moisture saved
- More timely seeding

To make this program all come together and be successful and grow profitable great stand of alfalfa, a grower should/must: 1. Plan head-select the field to be seeded at least a year before seeding. 2. Seed on well drained soil. 3. Seed in spring after winter soil-frost melt or in late summer at least six weeks prior to historic first-killing-frost date. 4. Test soil and apply needed lime and fertilizer; (lime a year ahead of seeding). Do not use nitrogen in no-till! 5. Control plant competition before and after seeding. 6. Seed at 15 to 20 pounds per acre at 1/4 to 1/2 inch depth; (perhaps up to 3/4-inch depth on sandy soils). 7. Scout often and control insects.

What about alfalfa seedling vigor? Alfalfa, once established, is a tough and persistent legume. But young seedlings can be very vulnerable. Competition with grass, broadleaf weeds, and grassy weeds, as well as resident legumes may cause many new seedlings to become crowded or smothered during early establishment. Control of existing plants prior to seeding is a must. Short-residual herbicides offer very effective broad-spectrum weed control before and after establishment.

Where no-till works best is in older perennial cool season grass sods, following row crops and residues from small grain crops — never into an old, thinning alfalfa stand.

Techniques for seeding into perennial cool season grass sods:

Spring Seeding:

Reduce the competition from existing plants with appropriate herbicides. Decide prior to seeding whether to eliminate all or a portion of the sod and modify applications accordingly. Since errors in seed placement are a primary cause of alfalfa stand failure, use only no-till drills designed for seeding into sod and adjust them to your soil and moisture conditions.

To eliminate as much of the sod as possible, mow or graze the field in early autumn and while it is still green, apply 1 quart of Gramoxone, or 1-2 quarts of Roundup per acre in 20+ gallons of water. In early spring, a follow-up application of 1 pint of Gramoxone may be used to control weeds and surviving old pasture growth. No-till seed in early spring. (Note, when using Gramoxone, always include the recommended rate of surfactant for best control).

To maintain a portion of the sod, graze or mow closely in early autumn and apply 1 quart of Gramoxone or 1 to 2 quarts of Roundup per acre. A follow-up spring application of 1 pint of Gramoxone is necessary only if winter weeds are a threat.

In areas where perennial broadleaf weeds such as dock, horse nettle, thistles, or other persistent weeds are present, apply 2,4-D and Banvel at locally recommended rates and dates.

Late summer seeding (a new technique developed in Virginia) has proven to be very successful. (The summer smother-crop, used in Virginia, may need to be amended to fit Pennsylvania conditions). This is the way it is done: Graze or mow the existing cover by late spring. Apply 1 quart of Gramoxone or 2 quarts of Roundup in 20+ gallons of water, per acre. No-till seed 20 to 25 pounds per acre of foxtail (German) millet per acre. Harvest the millet for hay or silage in 7 to 8 weeks (at early head stage). If weeds or other plants survive the spring herbicide and summer smother-crop, apply one pint of Gramoxone per acre for fall cleanup. Seed alfalfa no-till at 15 to 20 pounds per acre at least six weeks ahead of historic freeze date. (Note: whatever summer smother-crop is used, be sure to pick one that is terminal at harvest with no regrowth to compete with new alfalfa seedlings).

No-till seedlings follow row crops:

Following corn, (harvested as grain or silage), seed an adapted winter small grain for ground cover. If triazine herbicides (atrazine/simazine) were used in crop production, their residual effects can injure legumes planted the following spring so stick to labeled recommendations for best results. If triazines were used, disking to dilute the concentration of the residue will surely help. The following spring, apply 1-2 pints of Gramoxone in 20+ gallons of water per acre on the small grain when it is 4-6 inches tall. No-till seed 15 to 20 pounds of alfalfa immediately. Should small grain regrowth occur (5-6 inches), mow just above the alfalfa or graze to help prevent early smothering.

Alfalfa also may be seeded without tillage into standing small grain (8-10 inches tall) prior to harvest as silage. Rye harvested as silage in the boot stage will usually produce regrowth and must be mowed or chemically controlled with Poast at 4-6 inches of growth. Winter barley, (where adapted) and winter wheat, when cut in the dough stage helps reduce regrowth potential. In some cases however, some help may be needed from Poast.

When small grain silage is made before the boot stage, wait 5-10 days for regrowth and apply 1 pint of Gramoxone in 20+ gallons of water per acre prior to seeding alfalfa.

Forage And Grassland Council Conference Successful

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — 1998 American Forage and Grassland Council Conference (AFGC) was held here in March. More than 15 attendees were from Pennsylvania.

The theme of the conference was "Forages at the Crossroads".

The attendees heard a number of speakers covering topics such as the environment, wildlife, production, and utilization of forages.

There were six presentations by emerging scientists from throughout the country. The program was monitored by Marvin Hall, the executive vice president of PFGC. One of the papers was presented by Larry Hoover from Penn State, and his topic was "Interaction Between Mechanical Processing and Length of Cut on Particle Size Distribution, Compaction, Nutritive Quality, and Digestibility of Corn Silage."

There were seven presentations from producers in North America in the forage spokesperson program. George Heintz from Union City was PFGC's representative as a forage spokesperson program. George has a small dairy farm in Union City and he had slides and talked about his operation and his success in growing orchardgrass on his farm.

The conference attendees also had the opportunity to attend a number of oral papers that were presented by researchers throughout North America. Topics covered included research on alfalfa, broomegrass and alfalfa pastures, clover, grazing, pastures, and rotational grazing among the 19 papers offered.

Attendees also had the opportunity to tour some facilities in central Indiana. The tours included the Indianapolis Zoo and the challenges of feeding zoo animals, Kelsay Dairy Farm, Class Equipment Plant, and the Amax Coal Co., a large strip-mine operation that has done considerable work on reclamation of the land after mining.

R62. Engineered For Better Returns.

If it's large grain capacity you're looking for, the GLEANER® R62 can deliver the goods. In fact, farmers with large acreage really like this combine, because it comes with a standard 225-bushel or an optional 300-bushel grain tank. Just like its other GLEANER combine brothers, the R62 has a unique Natural Flow Harvesting System that's gentle on your grain. The transverse mounting cylinder moves your crop in a ribbon-like fashion from the concave through the cage. So your crop never changes direction, giving you higher grain quality. And the 64 inch cleaning shoe (the longest in the industry) contains an adjustable chaffer and sieve for even finer cleaning and separation. If it's power you want, the R62 comes equipped with a turbocharged, 260 hp, liquid-cooled engine. With a fuel tank that holds 150 gallons, you can work practically all day without stopping. To get a better look at the R62, just stop by and see us. You'll agree the GLEANER R62 is engineered for better returns.

MANAGING POTATO LEAFHOPPER DR. DENNIS CALVIN Penn State Entomologist

While some new alfalfa varieties offer resistance to the potato leafhopper, most varieties do not, so managing leafhoppers remains very important in producing alfalfa in Pennsylvania.

As spring approaches, warm air will begin to move into the northeast and bring with it spring showers. These spring showers that originate in the Gulf of Mexico can also bring the potato leafhopper.

The potato leafhopper is a migratory insect that overwinters in states along the Gulf of Mexico. It cannot survive the cold winter conditions in the northern United States. In the spring, potato leafhoppers wait for the right climatic conditions and then fly into updrafts created by strong storm systems developing in the Gulf of Mexico. The insects are drawn into the storm system and carried hundreds of miles north and eastward. Computer simulations of storm movement have predicted that potato leafhoppers can move from the Gulf of Mexico to Pennsylvania in as little as five days.

By understanding this behavior of the potato leafhopper, its arrival into Pennsylvania can be anticipated. In the spring, beginning around late April, major storms form the Gulf of Mexico begin to move north and east into Pennsylvania. The frequency and intensity of these storm fronts influence the timing and number of leafhoppers reaching the northeast United States.

In years when few storms arrive early, the arrival of leafhopper is later and the numbers arriving are lower, resulting in reduced pressure from the insect. Under these conditions, only a few second cutting alfalfa field typically need an insecticide application. However, the numbers build up during the second cutting and a greater number of third cutting field require an insecticide application.

In years when early spring storms originating in the Gulf of Mexico are frequent, potato leafhoppers in general arrive earlier and damage from the insect is greater. Under these conditions, many second and third cutting alfalfa fields require an insecticide application to prevent damage.

As the second cutting of alfalfa reaches about 2 to 4 inches in height, scout the field once a week. If a storm has just moved through the area, there is a good chance that new leafhoppers have moved into the field. Arriving leafhoppers prefer the new regrowth before it takes on the dark-blue green color of maturing alfalfa.

The wavelengths of light reflected from the young alfalfa plants that are yellow-green is very attractive to leafhoppers flying over the field. To a leafhopper, this indicates that the plant is succulent and rich in the nutrients it needs for proper egg development and growth and development.

Older plants have harder stems and leaves and a lower protein content. Besides proving a good diet for the leafhopper, the younger plants are more tender, making it easier for females to penetrate to stem to deposit their eggs in the stem.

Craig Elected President

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — The board of directors of PFGC elected Paul Craig as president at a board meeting held at the 1998 Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference March 5 at the Holiday Inn.

Craig has been involved in extension work for a number of years, most recently in Dauphin County with responsibilities in agronomy, dairy, and pesticide safety. He serves on the Grazing Conference Committee. Craig has been a long-time member of PFGC and is serving his second three-year term on the council.

Richard C. Hall also was re-elected to the position of executive director of PFGC. He works part time in his retirement for the Milton Hershey School as director of special projects.

Marvin Hall was re-elected as executive vice president. Hall is on the Agronomy extension staff at Penn State. He has been involved with PFGC for a number of years.

Grazing Workshop Proceedings Available

ITHACA, N.Y. — Feeding livestock on pasture is an increasingly important component of animal-based farming in the northeastern United States.

Producers who have successfully used grazing systems cite lower costs and greater profitability as primary reasons for switching from confined feeding systems.

Profitable grazing management is a knowledge-based system in which expertise and skilled management can to some extent replace energy, chemical, and dollar inputs.

"Grazing In the Northeast," NRAES-113, is a new publication from the Northeast Regional Agricultural Engineering Service (NRAES) that surveys this knowledge base, assessing current grazing technologies, research directions, and education needs for shaping a prosperous future for dairy, beef, and sheep operations.

The 218-page publication is the proceedings of the Grazing in the Northeast Workshop held in Camp Hill, Pennsylvania, on March 25-26, 1998. It includes 12 papers that address the following topics: assessing current technologies, research directions, and education needs in grazing; the pasture resource in the Northeast; pasture production; nutrition of grazing dairy and beef cattle; developing sustainable integrated animal and plant systems; farm infrastructure in support of grazing management; profitability of pasture systems; nutrient and manure management in pasture systems to protect water quality and land resources; integration of water quality and land resource protection in whole farm systems; effects of well-managed grazing on the farm family, rural community, and landscape; and grazing research and extension activities in the region.

"Grazing In the Northeast," NRAES-113, was edited by Charles R. Krueger, professor of agronomy, Penn State, and Harry B. Pionke, Pasture Systems and Watershed Management Research Laboratory, USDA-Agricultural Research Service. Authors of the papers include experts in forage management, forage agronomy, agricultural and resource economics, ruminant nutrition, dairy and animal science, conservation planning, soil science, and sustainable agriculture. The workshop and the proceedings were organized by the Northeast Pasture Research and Extension Consortium with the objectives of disseminating information on recent grazing research and extension programs with an emphasis on the northeast region and identifying critical research and extension needs.

The book will be welcomed by those with substantial experience in grazing, pasture research, or pasture education, including experienced graziers, agribusiness suppliers, NRCS staff, researchers, and extension specialists.

"Grazing In the Northeast: Assessing current Technologies, Research Directions, and Education Needs," NRAES-113, is priced at $30 per copy (plus shipping and handling). The shipping and handling charge is $5 for a single copy within the continental United States.

If ordering more than one copy or if ordering outside the U.S., please contact NRAES for shipping rates. Orders from outside the U.S. must be prepaid in U.S. funds. Major credit cards are accepted, and checks should be made payable to NRAES. For information about quantity discounts, or for a free publications catalog, contact NRAES by phone at (607)255-7654, by fax at (607)254-8770, or by e-mail at NRAES@CORNELLEDU. NRAES also maintains a Web site at <http://rcwpsun.cas.psu.edu/NRAES>.

SEEDING-YEAR ALFALFA HARVEST MARVIN H. HALL Extension Forage Specialist Penn State

Yield and persistence were once the primary concerns of producers and cutting at full flower was a common practice. However, with the advent of multi disease resistant varieties which have a broad range in dormancy levels, producers now have considerable flexibility in choosing a harvest management strategy to meet their needs.

Harvest of alfalfa which is spring seeded without a companion crop should not be delayed in an attempt to improve persistence. Young alfalfa stands (seeding year) are capable of persisting under more severe harvest management practices than older alfalfa stands.

Cutting of alfalfa 40 days after seeding does not lower stand persistence compared to cutting 80 days after seeding. Timing of the first harvest after seeding, however, does affect alfalfa yield and quality.

Harvesting the newly seeded alfalfa between the bud and 10 percent bloom stage of development produces the greatest dry matter and harvesting later results in less nutrient yield per acre. If soil fertility is optimum, the stand appears healthy, and a highly-disease resistant variety of alfalfa was seeded, then harvesting at the bud stage should be considered as harvest management option.

When a companion crop is spring seeded with the alfalfa, harvesting of the companion crop dictates the timing of the initial alfalfa harvest. Alfalfa seeded during late summer or early fall is usually well established by the following spring and can be subjected to the same harvest regime as established alfalfa.

Cutting alfalfa for the first time at a stubble height greater than 3 to 5 inches does not improve persistence but does lower yield. Yield reductions of approximately 35 percent are reported when alfalfa is cut at 9-inch compared to 3-inch stubble height.

Nothing Outlasts It. Nothing Outyields It.

High hay prices have dairy producers across the northeast US talking about planting more acres to alfalfa this spring. Talk to your Pioneer Sales Representative today about two exceptional Pioneer® brand alfalfa varieties still available.

In addition, ask how Pioneer® brand microbial inoculants for use on alfalfa silage and hay will help you produce the most high quality feed per acre.

TUBE-LINE BALEWRAPPER

For optimum speed and efficiency patented Tube-Line Wrappers are the answer! Tube-Line Wrappers wrap a continuous row of bales. The airtight application of stretch wrap film retains moisture balance as haylage matures and prevents air infiltration. The shrink wrap also prevents wind damage and accommodates variation in bale size and shape without air gaps.

Long stem silage is better used in the animals digestive system. Feeding high quality haylage from wrapped bales can reduce or eliminate feeding grain while retaining or increasing weight gains or milk production.

Tube-Line wrappers for all round bales or large square bales are available in either manual or fully automatic models.

One Pass In Fall

Versatile tillage tools such as Brillion's Soil Commander allows the use of Chisel Shanks or Deep-ripper. Shanks to break up soil compaction. Front disk gangs and optional rear leveling disks cut residue, breaks clods, level the field and prepare the field to absorb moisture from melting snow and to reduce soil erosion. Brillion's Field Commander combined with a Brillion Pulverizer excels at creating the perfect seedbed for spring planting. C-Shanks or S-Tine Shanks leave a uniform mixture of soil and surface residue for the most efficient chemical incorporation. The X-Fold Pulverizer (shown below) breaks up clods, firms the soil without compacting, eliminates air pockets in the soil and levels the soil for optimal seed placement. # EVALUATING AND MANAGING ESTABLISHED ALFALFA STANDS

WARREN THOMPSON, JOE
BOUTON, AND JIM MOUTRAY

There are numerous ways to evaluate alfalfa stands. One system that's precise is counting the number of plants or stems for a given area.

Visual evaluations are the most widely used by professionals and farmers alike. In this publication, we are presenting a new and more accurate method that is easy to follow, practical, and very reliable.

First, walk the field about 7-14 days after grazing or hay harvest.
Make 20 or more random readings using the pictures as a guide, recoding the number associated with each picture for each reading. The pictures visualize the alfalfa only; grass and/or weeds will fill in the bare soil. These must be taken into account in your readings. When you

(Turn to Page 22)

Reading = 2 Stands of 20 percent to 40 percent. These stands will usually yield less than half their potential as hay unless there is a good stand of grass in the mix. Without grass in the mix, weeds can become a real problem. This cover is also subject to crop rotation if the land is suitable.

Reading = 3 When stands hit 40 percent to 60 percent. These stands offer a lot more options. Yields in the 60 percent range would be expected. This stand is ideal for overdrilling orchardgrass, for example, at the 4-6 pound rate in the fall or early spring. If you are going to keep this field in alfalfa for a couple more years, why no add red-clover in the spring as well? Both grass and clover beat weeds!

Reading = 1 Less than 20 percent stand. If the land is suitable for row crops, this would be a great time to move along with the crop rotation. If the land is subject to severe water erosion or you want to keep it in forage production for another year or so, overdrill with cool season grass or red clover.

The Model 55 is the most versatile of all models matching up to a wide variety of bale patterns. It can carry up to 12 two tie bales, 8 three tie or 3 midsize bales at a time. It can also be connected to a 90 degree rotator, a powered vertical tilt, or any of a variety of loader units.

MODEL 65/65-N

The Model 65 is specifically built to match up with all New Holland 3 bale wide stack wagons. It can carry 12, 15 or 18 bales flat or on edge depending on model. It is ideal for topping stacks or loading and unloading trucks.

Innovative Hay Handling Solutions For Today's Hay Producers.

MODEL 200/400

The model 200 is a highly maneuverable vehicle built from the ground up specifically for handling hay. It can be mated with all bale rack models to handle all sizes of square bales, large or small. Its extremely rugged design easily handles up to 2000 lbs. to 21' high or in the Model 400 version 4000 lbs. up to 25' high.

MODEL 84/85

These models are extra heavy duty for the demanding application of carrying up to 2 big bales or 3 midsize bales at a time. They have additional bearings and extra large teeth that dig deep into the bales to insure a firm grip even with soft or wet tops.

MODEL N/950

The model 950 is specifically made for packaging 10 bales together to form a tie package measuring approximately 6-1/2 x 8' ready to load directly onto a truck. This completely eliminates the need for someone to turn bales on the truck to get a full load. Also, it eliminates the need to hand stack at the barn. This is truly the only system that eliminates all hand labor.

Model 1275 Forage Harvester
With Exclusive Crop Processor™

HERE'S A NEW, INNOVATIVE CONCEPT IN PULL-TYPE FORAGE HARVESTERS.

Gehl Company once again leads the industry by incorporating an exclusive Crop Processor™ into today's largest capacity pull-type forage harvester.

Using the Gehl Model 1265 as a product platform (it's capable of handling up to 300 PTO horsepower) Gehl engineers have incorporated a pair of crop processing rolls directly behind the cutter-head cylinder.

Equipped with a corn head, this unit chops and processes corn silage in a single field operation. The high-speed grooved rolls not only crack kernels, but break up the cob and "condition" the stalk material as well.

The benefits of processed corn silage include increased milk production (two to four pounds per day has been reported) and 10 to 20 percent higher digestibility. Studies have shown that processing prior to storage improves feed quality compared to processing after storage.

In addition, the forage harvester can be set to deliver a longer length of cut without large pieces of cob or whole kernels getting through the processing rolls. And for chopping haylage, the processing rolls can be removed.

drilling grasses. Spring is usually best for clovers. In most of the "alfalfa belt," a 4 to 6 pound seeding rate of orchardgrass through a no-till drill is the system of choice. However, bromegrass, tall fescue, and bluegrass are often used in some areas.

Also, a word to the wise: when alfalfa and grasses are grown together, there are two "pigs" feeding at the same trough and the grass will be the heavier feeder. So take soil tests frequently for guidance and treat accordingly to prevent and reduce grass crowing.

'Garnergrass' Management Leads To Improved Forage On Montrose Farm

ANDY ANDREWS

Lancaster Farming Staff

MONTROSE (Susquehanna Co.)

—For years, one Susquehanna County grazer called it "garnergrass," because it simply didn't fit the description of any common forage.

It wasn't well-known type of grass. It grew profusely and quickly. It endured drought. It was a "monoculture" and it worked, in a way, to feed the herd.

But Jim Garner, in whose honor the grass was named on his farm, was unhappy with the results. The feed quality was low in terms of protein and dry matter. The milking average of his dairy was low and needed improvement.

Then, along about 1990, Garner listened to the work of Sonny Golden, a dairy nutritionist from Springville. Garner said that Golden, a proponent of grazing for a long time, told him to fence off the entire farm and simply grow pasture.

So, the same year, Garner sold his baler and other harvesting equipment. He kept the rake, rotary mower, and manure spreader. He took a first cutting of the grass and baled it up.

Then he brought his dairy herd onto the intensive rotational pasture.

Those efforts paid off in a big way. By allowing the cows to harvest the "garnergrass," forage protein content improved to 20 percent from 12 percent. Dry matter intake went up. The milk average, already low, increased.

Now, Garner takes about 18,000 pounds of milk from the cows.

More importantly, gone are the headaches of mechanization, equipment repair, feed worries, and other matters.

Last month, Garner was recognized with the Outstanding Pasture Producer Award from the Pennsylvania Forage and Grazing Council at its awards ceremony in Grantville.

Garner, technician with the Susquehanna County Conservation District, has hosted numerous field days and tours of his farm.

He manages about 35 acres — all pasture. "Everything has a fence around it," he said.

He raises about 70 head of all-registered Holstein. There are about 45 milking cows and the remainder are dry cows and young stock.

Garner began work on the dairy in 1980, when, he noted, "Kay and I purchased the farm." His father was a farm manager and, at the time, owned only an old car. He essentially started farming from scratch — what few farmers can do anywhere these days.

Garner farms with wife Kay and two daughters, Melinda, 22 and Andrea, 18, and a son, Justin, 14. His two daughters are in college — Melinda is student teaching and Andrea is a dairy science major at Delaware Valley College. Justin is in the 9th grade.

Garner, who began grazing in 1989, switched to an intensive rotational grazing system in 1990. He began grazing on paddocks measuring 5-7 acres.

Back then, grazing was relegated to "steel wires and posts," with little flexibility, he noted. Now, the one-acre paddocks are rotated every 12 hours.

THE POWER TO IMPLEMENT PRECISION FARMING YEAR 'ROUND

A New Generation in Monitoring

Ag Leader Technology

provides accurate, reliable, and user-friendly tools for precision agriculture. The flexibility of these tools allows each producer to build a system to fit a wide array of types and brands of farm machinery to fit individual needs. And, Ag Leader Technology continues to provide the best customer support in the industry.

The Ag Leader PF3000 Precision Farming System

is a general-purpose monitor/controller. On a combine, the PF3000 system measures and displays yield, moisture, combine speed, grain flow, and acres per hour. The PF3000 also displays and records average yield, average moisture, acres, distance, wet bushels, and dry bushels of each load as well as field totals.

It organizes data by year, farm, field, grain, and load for easy identification. Data can be transferred to a computer to print a summary of all fields. Also, print yield and moisture maps if you are using GPS and a memory card.

The optional elevator-mount moisture sensor provides accurate moisture readings even in the toughest conditions.

Lush Spring Pastures Aren't Always A Plus

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Rapidly growing spring pastures provide plenty of feed for grazing cattle, but they also can cause a potentially fatal condition called grass tetany, said Ohio State University Extension beef cattle specialist Steve Boyles.

Temperatures have been warmer than normal this spring, so pasture grasses are getting a head start on spring growth.

"If we have a lot of rain and overcast skies, the chances of grass tetany could increase," Boyles said.

Grass tetany occurs when blood levels of magnesium in cattle become too low. This often happens in the spring when cattle eat fast-growing grasses that do not absorb enough magnesium from the soil.

Pastures with high potassium levels have a greater risk of causing grass tetany. Nitrogen and potassium interfere with the absorption of magnesium from plants to cattle during digestion, Boyles said. The percentage of cattle with tetany can be 10 times higher than normal if they are grazed pastures with excess potassium fertilization.

"Have a feed analysis done to measure the mineral levels in your pastures," he said. "I have observed high potassium levels in some regions of Ohio."

A simple formula beef producers can use to evaluate potential of pasture grasses based off a feed analysis is to divide percent potassium by the sum of percent magnesium and percent calcium. If the resulting number is higher than 2.2, grass tetany potential is greater.

Phosphorus can improve absorption of magnesium by plants and may even lower potassium uptake. Phosphorus fertilization may reduce grass tetany potential if phosphorus levels in the soil are currently low, Boyles said.

Older cows that are calving and producing milk have high nutrient needs, so they are at a greater risk for grass tetany.

One of the first signs of grass tetany in cattle is nervousness, followed by incoordination, such as staggering and falling. Within hours of the first symptoms, seizures cause cattle to literally lose control of their muscles and soon die, Boyles said.

"You may not be able to catch an animal in time for treatment, because symptoms occur so rapidly," Boyles said. "Often cows are found dead before producers can notice the signs. So prevention is the key, not treatment."

Grass tetany can be prevented by adding 10 percent to 15 percent magnesium oxide to a cow's daily mineral supplement. Animals do not store magnesium in their body like they do other minerals, so it's important that they get the amount they need from their daily diet. The daily intake for cattle should be 2 ounces per animal.

The magnesium supplement can be fed like any other mineral, either in a block or loose form. But, cattle don't seem to like the taste of magnesium oxide by itself, so producers should mix it with at least 5 percent soybean meal or molasses to ensure the cattle eat it, Boyles said.

Magnesium sulfate also can be used as a supplement.

"Incorporating magnesium into regular protein or energy supplements provides a greater assurance of consumption," he said. "And, producers normally don't put mineral supplements next to a water source to encourage animals to graze more between the two. But if chances of grass tetany are severe, put the supplement close to a water source because you want them to eat it."

Grass tetany treatment results vary from excellent to poor, depending on how quickly an animal is treated. If animals with the illness are treated with a magnesium injection within one or two hours after symptoms appear, they usually recover quickly. Cattle on pasture should be observed at least twice a day when they are first turned out to grass, Boyles said.

Grass tetany is not as common in sheep as it is in cattle, but the condition can still occur. Sheep producers also should make sure their animals are getting enough magnesium in the spring months, especially ewes that are lambing, said Ohio State University Extension sheep specialist Roger High. Sheep that avoid the rest of the flock, don't eat and walk stiffly could be experiencing grass tetany.

For more information about how to protect livestock from grass tetany, producers should contact a veterinarian or their county office of Ohio State University Extension.

USING ALFALFA-GRASS MIXTURES TO MINIMIZE DEER DAMAGE

DR. MARVIN H. HALL
ROB STOUT
Penn State

The objective of research recently completed at Penn State University was to determine if alfalfa-grass mixtures reduce the level of deer feeding associated with pure alfalfa. Forages protected from deer feeding averaged 1,660 pounds per acre more dry matter yield than their unprotected counterparts. The greatest amount of deer feeding occurred in pure alfalfa and the least in pure orchardgrass.

Forage quality was not affected by deer grazing. Weeds invasion was more severe in unprotected than protected (deer were excluded with fencing) plots.

Deer feeding resulted in average economic losses of $80 and $28 per acre for pure alfalfa and pure orchardgrass, respectively.

Deer selectively grazed alfalfa out of the alfalfa-grass mixtures and fed more on plots which contained timothy than those which contained orchardgrass. Economic losses associated with deer feeding were greater for mixtures containing timothy than orchardgrass. In area unprotected from deer feeding, pure orchardgrass and alfalfa-orchardgrass mixtures had greater yields than pure alfalfa.

In addition, alfalfa-orchardgrass mixtures had greater economic returns than pure alfalfa but only when alfalfa was seeded at greater than or equal to 50 percent of the mixture.

Deer feeding can greatly reduce forage yield. Deer selectively grazed alfalfa out of alfalfa-grass mixtures and showed a preference for timothy over orchardgrass. The use of orchardgrass alone or in a mixture with alfalfa minimizes deer feeding and provides the greatest yields. However, when deer feeding occurred, net economic returns were greater for alfalfa-orchardgrass mixtures because of improved quality compared to pure orchardgrass.

More and more farmers are making hay the big way. More farmers are buying square balers from Hooper, Inc. With three models to choose from, the reasons to buy a CASE IH big square baler are clear:

Productivity

CASE IH big square bales are quick to handle, and that means you can be more productive. In fact, with a CASE IH big square baler you can bale up to 20 tons of hay per hour. And there's no stopping to tie and eject bales.

Shipping

CASE IH big square bales give you large transport payload. Since bales are stackable, you can fit more hay into a limited area. The bottom line is more bales of hay per truckload.

High Moisture Wrapping

CASE IH big square balers use high moisture wrapping to deliver consistent bale weight and density regardless of varying moisture conditions. CASE IH balers keep moisture in for better quality hay. Higher hay quality means more profits.

Less Leaf Loss

CASE IH big square balers are center-line balers and have an extra wide pick-up for increased capacity with less leaf loss. And a charge chamber preforms bale flakes for better leaf retention to ensure higher hay quality.

Less Loss

CASE IH big square balers are the most efficient way to bale hay.
